ROLLINS AND CURTIS UNDER ARREST

WORLD'S AIR PRIZE YANKEE'S

ZURICH, Oct. 6—Edgar W. Mix, the only American contestant in the international balloon race for the James Gordon Bennett cup, has won the trophy with a flight estimated at 680 miles. He sailed in the America II. from Schlieren, near here, to the forest of Gutova, just north of Warsaw, Russian Poland.

Mix was in the air three days and nights and in storms almost the entire time. On landing he was seized by the Russian police. An appeal for his release has been made to the American ambassador at St. Petersburg.

The aeronaut sent the following report:

"My ballast was exhausted when I came down. I had bad weather Sunday night. It was cloudy and rain fell. I used half of my ballast before morning. The weather was so thick that it was impossible to locate my position except for one hour south of Prague and a star observation. The star observation showed me to be at latitude 51:45:1 and longitude 10:0:38."

Mix showed his daring in this race. Disregarding personal discomfort, he would not have landed when he did except that the condition of his car made it impossible for him to remain aloft longer.

The journey was made through intense cold, hampered by wind, fog and rain.

HARVARD KEY GIVEN LOWELL

The most brilliant exercises in all the 273 years' history of Harvard took place today when Abbott Lawrence Lowell, in the presence of an assemblage of nearly 10,000 people in the college yard, Cambridge, was formally declared President of Harvard University.

It was nearly noon when the actual inaugural took place. Former Governor John D. Long, president of the board of overseers of the university, advanced to the front of the open air rostrum in front of University Hall, where the exercises took place, and said:

> Abbott Lawrence Lowell:
>
> You having been duly chosen to be President of Harvard College, I do now, in the name of its governing bodies and in accordance with ancient custom, declare that you are vested with all the powers and privileges of that office. It is a great trust, but it is laid on you in full confidence that you will discharge it in the interest alike of the college we love and of the democracy it serves. I deliver into your hands, as badges of your authority, the college charter, seal and keys. God bless you.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 6—Although Yale started its first string eleven against Holy Cross to-day the coaches planned to send into the game enough second string men so that two full elevens would get a chance to work. Fred Daly, who bruised a tendon last Saturday, was expected to start the game but Messinger, the former New Haven High School player, who has been showing promise as a line-borer, was scheduled for most of the game in his place.

In view of thet warm wave Coach Jones decided to accede to the Holy Cross request and agree to play only twenty-minute halves. Yale wanted the palying periods twenty-five minutes each.

Lats year Yale scored eighteen points on Holy Cross and her coaches expected to surpass the score to-day as the Yale eleven is just now traveling at a rapid clip.

The Yale goal has not been in danger this year and Yale did not look for a score from the visitors, although Holy Cross always had some clever moves in reserve and expected to spring a few.

No word has come from "Ham" Andrus, who was expected to send word from Seattle that he had arrived there from Alaska before this. It is taken for granted that he is still en route and he cannot possibly be here before October 12 and he can hardly be available for the West Point game which is scheduled for Oct. 16.

LAWYERS IN HOT CLASH AT STEEL TRIAL

For the first time since the trial of the so-called steel cases began ten days ago, there was a real clash in the Superior Criminal Court that promised some excitement to-day.

Attorney Hurlburt was angry and Assistant District Attorney Curtis was bound to have his way.

Curtis formally demanded of the lawyers for the thirty-two defendants the original charters of defendant corporations.

"You have no right to make such a demand in open court," declared Attorney Hurlburt. "There is a proper way of making such a demand. You have not used it. You should not make such a demand in the presence of the jury. If you persist in making such speeches in the presence of the jury, I will call the attention of the judge to the possible impression that it will make."

A consultation then followed between the lawyers for both sides and the court. Afterwards Assistant District-Attorney Curtis introduced a certified copy of the charter of the Berlin Construction Company.

Frederick H. Fay of the city engineer's office, the only witness who had testified in the ten days of the trial and who has been on the stand for five days, completed his testimony early to-day.

He testified that in the case of the Northern avenue bridge two sets of bids were made. The first set were rejected, he testified, because they were all too high.

Henry R. W. Brown, assistant clerk in the Superior Civil Court, was the next witness. He was asked to produce certain papers in the case of Harry P. Converse against the Phoenix Iron Company. Attorney Hurlburt objected to their introduction. "I offer these to show that the defendants, Converse and Bliss, were doing business together," said Mr. Curtis.

AGED WOMAN BADLY INJURED BY AUTO

While crossing the street to-day at Massachusetts avenue and Island street, Miss Ellen Sullivan, sixty years of age, of No. 11 Fellows street, Roxbury, was knocked down by automobile No. 23210, owned and operated by Nishan Gulesian of No. 149 Shawmut avenue. The woman was rushed to the City Hospital. Her collar bone was broken and her body was covered with bruises. It is feared she may have received internal injuries.

WOMAN BACKS BILL TO PUNISH SLANDER

CINCINNATI, Oct. 6.—Mrs. Gussie Ogden Drewitz, a former Chicago society woman, has become a suffragist, and started to raise $10,000 to urge on the Legislature a bill to punish men who slander women. Mrs. Drewitz, who recently failed to get a divorce from the Rev. Mr. Drewitz, says her marital troubles have driven her to the suffragist cause. She was the widow of John Ogden of Chicago, said to be a relative of J. Ogden Armour.

ROCKLAND, Me., Oct. 6.—Hoping to equal or even exceed the record made by the Flusser, built by the same firm, which made her fastest mile at the rate of 33.7 knots an hour on her standardization trial a month ago, the officials of the Bath Iron Works put the torpedo boat destroyer Reid over the Rockland mile course to-day for her standardization tests, preliminary to her official standardization trial.

INDICT KIDNAPPER, MOTHER ASKS JURY

Mrs. Florence V. Higgins and her daughter, Edna, appeared before the grand jury to ask for the indictment of John Burnham Harris for the abduction of her fifteen-year-old daughter, Mildreth, which she alleged he accomplished after he had chloroformed the mother in her home at midnight Monday.

The whereabouts of Harris and the girl are unknown, but it is believed that they are in New York. It was learned to-day that Harris has a wife. She was located by a reporter of the AMERICAN, to whom she told the brief story of her wedded life. She declared that she would prosecute Harris for bigamy if he married the Higgins girl.

Young Mrs. Harris is about twenty. She is employed in Malden. Her maiden name was Lucina McDonald. This is her story:

"I was married to Harris a year ago. He seemed a good fellow, and I thought he would make a good husband. We were both working for a living then, and I concluded that by both working together we could get a good living. We were married in Everett. We lived together until July, when I left him. He did not treat me right.

"He beat me and took my locket and my money when we were working at the beach. I left him the next morning and got another room. I worked until I became ill and had to go to the hospital. He did not do anything to aid me while I was in the hospital.

Wife Tells Story.

"He was accustomed to go around with actresses and other women. One day I met him in the company of another woman, the one with whom he ran away I think. I went up to them, and told her that I was his wife, and he had no right to be going out with another woman. She seemed surprised. He told her, however, not to believe me; that I was not his wife. She seemed to believe him, and went away with him.

"When I demanded my locket he turned out the lights, locked the door and beat me until the blood flowed from my nose and lips. Then my brother heard about that, and gave him a beating.

"A little later he had another fight with a fellow by the name of Ford, and lost his job. That was the last I heard of him until recently when his mother told me she thought he had gone to Panama. Then I decided to get a divorce from him. We wondered how we could serve divorce papers down in Panama. I talked that over with my folks many times. Yesterday I saw in the papers that he had run away with this girl, and it all came back to me.

"I went to-day to see the girl's mother, and she was not at home. If he has married this young girl, I am going to have him punished for bigamy. He has gone under assumed names, some of which have been mentioned in the papers.

"His name is John Edward Lucas Burnham Harris. Sometimes he uses one section of his name and sometimes another. There is enough of it to satisfy all demands for aliases. He has a spot of white hair on the back of his head, and a bracelet tattooed on his right wrist. He has a sailor's knot tattoed on his left wrist. There are hearts, daggers and a whole collection of tattoos on both of his arms. All this was done when he was in the navy."

Mrs. McDonald, Harris's mother-in-law, when seen at No. 412 Riverside avenue, Medford, said:

"My daughter has certainly had an unfortunate experience with this young man Burnham or Harris. Harris is the name of his stepfather. He formerly lived at No. 5 Hadley court, Everett. Early last Summer he got a job as an usher at the Rustic Theatre, Revere Beach. It was there that he met the girl he is said to have kidnapped.

"He met my daughter about Thanksgiving of last year. He lived at my house then. On March 16 last he and Lucina were married. They did not live long together. My daughter is now employed in Malden and resides with her brother-in-law, whose name is Myers. My daughter is the legal wife of Burnham, and if he marries the Higgins girl he will be a bigamist.

"Burnham was four years in the navy. He overstayed his leave once and was arrested and taken back. He was a favorite with girls and has a number of sweethearts in Everett, Malden and Medford."

Had Strange Influence.

Mrs. Higgins was so ill last night and to-day that a doctor had to be called a number of times. She alleges now that Burnham tried to blind her when he pressed a cloth saturated in some kind of powerful drug over her face.

The mother and sister of the missing girl were in such a state of hysteria last night that Policeman Fraser decided to remain in the house with them.

"The man who stole my daughter and $220 of my money," said the mother today, "had a mysterious influence over her. When he was with her she loved him, but when he was away she detested him. I do not know whether the influence was hypnotic or not, but it was enough to make her do what he told her."

ALEXANDER PRESIDENT.

The Goodfellowship Club of the Henry Siegel Company held its Fall banquet at the Hotel Thorndike last night. The following officers were elected: R. G. Alexander, president; C. F. Carroll, vice-president; H. O. Tracey, secretary. The club is composed of the buyers and department heads of the Siegel concern. Speeches were made by J. E. Priddey, secretary of the Siegel Company, M. H. Meyers, general manager of the store, and Joseph Siegel of New York.

Charles H. Rollins, formerly a member of the staff of Governor Draper, of No. 497 Commonwealth avenue, and with a fine Summer home in Hull, a broker and connected with firm of Freeman, Rollins & Comapny, was arrested this afternoon by Police Inspector Armstrong on a secret indictment warrant charging him with the larceny of $116,530 in twenty counts on May 1, 1909, from L. M. Binsord and Alexandria Greene and others.

Harry F. Curtis, of the former firm of Curtis & Sederquist, went into police headquarters following the arrest of Mr. Rollins and gave himself up to Inspector Armstrong. He lives at No. 6 Prescott street, Brookline.

He is charged by secret indictment with the larceny of $116,530 from the same persons. This is the fourth arrest in the failure of Sederquist, Barry & Co. He was taken before Judge Waite and bail in $20,000 was required of him.

Curtis was arraigned before Judge Waite in the Superior Criminal Court and was held under bail of $20,000, the same amount set for Sederquist and Barry. Bail was promptly furnished by Carrie L. Curtis of Brookline and Frank J. Bartlett of Malden, and Curtis was free again just ten minutes after he gave himself up.

Mr. Rollins at once went before Judge Waite in the first session of the Superior Criminal Court. He was accompanied by his attorney, Hugh W. Ogden of the firm of Whipple, Sears & Ogden.

Barry Awaits Bail.

Judge Waite held Rollins for a hearing. He demanded $20,000 bail. This was furnished at once by W. B. Ames of North eastern, and Gilmer Clapp of Waltham.

Arthur B. Sederquist of the firm of Sederquist, Barry & Company, was arrested on September 3 in Wolfboro, N. H. He was charged with the conversion of money given him by H. S. Gregor of Manchester, N. H., to purchase stocks. That suit was for $1,400. Bail was furnished him by George A. Carpenter of Wolfboro and Willis S. Rollins of Acton.

John E. Barry of the firm was arrested last Monday. He has not been able to get bail and is still in the Charles street jail.

At a meeting of a committee of the creditors of Sederquist, Barry & Company, held at the Parker House on August 28, an examination of the books showed that the firm had liabilities amounting to $600,000 while the known assets were but $20,000. There were 1,151 unsecured creditors.

In a circular issued to the creditors the committee declared they had "found a state of affairs so startling as to warrant your immediate action."

Firm Failed in May.

The firm failed on May 29, for $660,097. The firm did business at No. 19 Congress street.

The creditors' committee at the time of their investigation in August expressed the belief that Harry F. Curtis, who is a member of the predecessor firm of Curtis & Sederquist, might be held equally responsible with the bankrupts in their civil liabilities to creditors.

This belief was based in part on the testimony given before the trustees in bankruptcy to the effect that in February, 1908, Mr. Curtis withdrew from the company $125,000, though for three months prior to that date no trial balance had been taken to show whether the firm was then solvent; and in part upon "the existence of a reported indebtedness by the bankrupts to the New York Stock Exchange house of Freeman, Rollins & Co., of about $100,000."

TIGERS PLAY BENEFIT GAME IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Taking the chances of crippling his team before the battel for the world's championship can be decided, and disregarding the heavy expense entailed, Hugh Jennings led the Detroit American League baseball team against the Yankees in a benefit game arranged by Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, for Sam Crane, the veteran baseball player.

Never before in the annals of baseball had a managr made such a sacrifie. The game to-day, coming immediately before the world's championship series opening in Pittsburg on Friday, offered a unique spectacle.

"Our club has made plenty of money this year and I guess the boys are willing to take the risk," said Jennings, manager of the Tigers.

Not only the ball players were anxious to contribute their services in honor of one of the greatest players and writers in the national sport, but the grounds were filled with fans of every description, including ball players, actors, politicians and staid business men from every walk of life.

OPEN HARVARD HOUSE TO-DAY AT STRATFORD

STRATFORD-ON-AVON, Oct. 6.—Harvard House, the home of Katherine Rogers Harvard, mother of the founder of Harvard University, was formally opened today with elaborate ceremonies and with Ambassador Reid officiating.

Harvard House was purchased and restored by Edward Morris, the Chicago millionaire, at the suggestion of Marie Corelli, the novelist. The house is a rendezvous for Americans visiting Stratford, and, in fact, is sought out by tourists from all over the world.

The old house was built in 1596 and has been restored to exact similitude to the condition of the fifteenth century. It is the property of Harvard University, having been presented to that institution by Mr. Morris.

The opening of Harvard House was the first public function undertaken by Ambassador Reid since his return to England. Miss Corelli was Mr. Reid's hostess. A feature of the occasion was the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by Mme. Ada Crossley.

Harvard House is one of the most beautiful of the old English buildings. It is a far more perfect specimen of the period than Shakespeare's abode. All modernities were removed in the restoration and the old timbers were allowed to show.

DRAPER ACTS FOR CHINESE

Governor Draper and the Executive Council today granted a respite of sixty days to Warry S. Charles and Joe Guey, the two Chinamen sentenced to die during the week of October 17 for their participation in the shooting up of Chinatown, for which crime three other Chinamen will forfeit their lives in the electric chair next week.

Counsel for Charles and Guey last week filed the Governor a petition for an absolute pardon for these men, but because General Charles W. Bartlett, their senior counsel, is engaged in the trial of the "steel cases" before the Superior Court this week he found it impossible to properly prepare their case for presentation to the pardon committee of the Council next week, as would be necessary in the absence of a resuite. In order that he may have ample time, therefore, the Council granted a respuite for sixty days from October 17.

About four days more of life are all that the three Chinamen now confined in the death cells in the house of execution in Charlestown State Prison will probably be allowed.

The death watch sits at their cell doors, one guard in front of each of the grim little steel cages in which the men are confined. Watches of eight hours are sat through by the guards. Nine men, for the whole twenty four hours of the day, are watching every movement of the three men who are condemned to die some time next week.

A Chinaman, a cook, who is serving a life sentence in the State Prison, under the watchful eyes of the warden, General Benjamin F. Bridges, or some trusted deputy, is preparing Chinese dishes for the three prisoners.

Making Last Hours Pleasant.

Everything possible is being done to make the final hours and minutes of existence of these three men as comfortable and as pleasant as could be under the circumstances.

But, although their measure of time is swiftly running out, Min Sing, Leong Gong and Hom Woon exhibited not the slightest feeling nor concern.

They are fatalists. Death means nothing to them. These three men refused to seek life imprisonment instead of death.

Min Sing, who is thirty-one years of age, is married. He has a wife and one child living in faraway China. Sometimes a worried look flits across his face as a slight cloud. He is probably thinking of his little family. Leong Gong is a boy. He is but nineteen.

The condemned Chinamen showed no feeling at all when they were removed from Charles street jail yesterday by Sheriff Fred Seavey and a deputy and told that they were making their last journey.

Pleased with Attentions.

But the attentions which Warden Bridges and his deputies are paying the men please them. They are grateful for the Chinese dishes and delicacies which are being served to them. The warden is careful to inquire what they wish to eat and then he has the dishes prepared by the Chinese cook.

This cook does not know for whom he is preparing the food. That fact is kept from him. Every dish is cooked and compounded under the eyes of the warden or a deputy. To-day the prisoners breakfasted on rice cooked in Chinese fashion, coffee and toast in unlimited quantities.

So far these men have not been visited by spiritual advisers. Warry Charles is a Christianized Chinaman, but his associates are believers in the religion of their native land and have asked for no spiritual counsel. If they do ask to have an adviser of their own race admitted to speak with them this man will have to prove his character to the entire satisfaction of the warden.

W. C. RUSSELL TO TESTIFY IN $500,000 SUIT

William C. Russell, the man who is contesting the claim of Daniel Blake Russell to one-half of the $500,000 estate left by Daniel Russell of Melrose, is ready to take the witness stand in the Probate Court at East Cambridge some time to-day.

It is believed that when he does take the stand the claimant, Daniel Blake Russell, will be brought into court. It will be the first time that the two men will be in court together. It is not their first meeting, though. Once before they met, when Daniel Blake Russell first appeared from the West. At that time William C. Russell refused to recognize him as a brother.

At the opening of court Attorney Proctor declared: "I have one more very important witness to examine. I expected him before this. He will be here later."

Fight Over Witness.

Attorney Simpson for the claimant caused a sensation when he demanded the appearance in court of the witness William C. Ruseau, who claims to be the brother of James Delbert Ruseau, who the lawyers for William C. Russell declare Daniel Blake Russell really is.

"I was promised that this man would be in court every day," declared Mr. Simpson. "I am not through with him. He has been served with a subpoena which calls for his appearance each day and his witness fees have been paid. My brother Mr. Proctor promised to have him here. He has not been here for two days."

Attorney Proctor declared that he did not know where William C. Ruseau was. Attorney Berry was then asked and he replied, "I will tell you where he is if you will tell me where the claimant, Daniel Blake Russell, is."

Judge Lawton and Attorney Simpson then conferred and His Honor announced that he would hear the claimant's attorney this afternoon in regard to compelling the attendance of William C. Ruseau.

Knew James D. Russell.

Theodore H. Hayes of Midway, North Dakota, testified that he had known James D. Russell for nine years and that the photos in evidence were those of the man he had known under that name. "Russell had the next ranch to mine," said the witness. "I knew him as James D. Russell. Three years ago he and I went into the stock raising business together. His cattle were branded J. D. R. and the ranch was known as the J. D. R. ranch. I understood that the J. was for James and the D. for Daniel.

The witness then testified that he was familiar with his handwriting and had seen him sign his name. He was handed an envelope, but before he could identify it Attorney Simpson demanded the right to cross-examine. It was granted.

SCHOOL FOR WAITERS LAYS DOWN RULES

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—A school for waiters is the latest innovation at the University of Chicago. Here are some bits of instruction from its text book:

Avoid appearing to slam things down on the table.

Never take in oatmeal and save the milk, for in such a case the customer cannot begin his meal till you return.

Always place a drink to the right of the customer.

A waiter should never leave any customer after serving till he knows he has the necessary silverware to eat with.

A cereal in the morning should be served right away, whether the rest of the order be ready or not.

An egg with a broken yolk should not be served.

To be a good waiter it is essential that you should be quick, but also that you should not appear to hurry.

Waiters should remove dirty dishes as soon as the customer is through, but be sure that he is through and avoid giving an impression that you are in a hurry for him to finish.

There are a thousand and one other gentle reminders in the book for the forty student waiters who serve their 700 fellows at the men's commons. They were compiled in a pamphlet of eleven pages by Thomas L. Barrell, manager of the restaurant, who often has been vexed as he was forced to watch green and careless waiters conducting themselves in a way that offended his ideas of restaurant etiquette.

TIRED OF KISSING, WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

LAMBERTSVILLE, N. J., Oct. 6.—Because she says he insisted on kissing her and on being kissed until it was cruelty, Mrs. Henrietta McGrew has brought suit in Hitchcock County, against John E. McGrew for divorce.

She says after waiting six months for the osculation to diminish she found it had increased.

GROSS FUNDED DEBT OF CITY INCREASED

The gross funded debt of the city on October 1 was $110,902,006, an increase of $2,417,100 since the first of the year, according to the monthly exhibit of the city auditor made public to-day. The net funded debt of the city on October 1 was $75,175,713.71, an increase of $1,689,318.26 since January 1. The city had the right to borrow under the statutes on January 1 of the current year $2,674,646.53, and this amount has been reduced by loans authorized and issued until on October 1 the city had the right to borrow $341,146.53.

NEW MARKET FOR HORSES.

A new market for American thoroughbred horses has been found by J. C. Hains, manager of the Kentucky Stock Farm owned by J. B. Haggin. He returned to-day aboard the Norton line steamer St. Nicholas from Buenos Ayres, where he disposed of 100 fine horses from the Kentucky farm.

FOUR KILLED, MANY HURT IN TRAIN WRECKS

Reports of railroad wrecks came from various parts of the country to-day. Three men were killed in a collision on the Intercolonial Railway at Nash's Creek, N. B. In an Illinois Central crash near Parnell, Ill., one woman was killed and about two score hurt. Other accidents were at Blytheville, Ark., Salina, Tex., and Old Orchard, Me.

Three Trainmen Killed.

DALHOUSIE JUNCTION, N. B., Oct. 6.—Three trainmen were killed, another was buried under wreckage and probably fatally injured and two others were seriously injured early to-day when the Maritime express, Halifax for Montreal, was in a head-on collision with a special freight train at Nash's Creek, about twenty-two miles southeast of here on the Intercolonial railway. The dead:

Engineer Morton of Campbellton.

Engineer Whitten of Moncton.

Express Messenger Morrison of St. John.

Fireman Cook of Campbellton was buried under the debris of his locomotive, and he is believed to have been killed or fatally injured. The brakemen received severe injuries.

No passengers are known to have been injured any more seriously than being badly shaken up and bruised.

Two Score Illinois Victims.

CLINTON, Ill., Oct. 6.—One person is known to be dead and fully forty are suffering from injuries received in a wreck on the Illinois Central railroad near Parnell, Ill., fifteen miles from here, when a southbound Illinois Central accommodation train and a northbound excursion train met on the same rail in head-on collision.

Miss Clara Watson was killed.

The wrecked trains were local passenger train No. 525, leaving Chicago at 5:50, and a special excursion train bearing State fair visitors which left Springfield shortly after 7 o'clock. The two trains met on a sharp curve southwest of Parnell, where a terrible accident occurred about 7 o'clock yesterday evening.

Locomotive Jumps Track.

OLD ORCHARD, Me., Oct. 6.—As the Portland-Boston express approached the Old Orchard station to-day an axle on locomotive 369 broke, the locomotive jumped the tracks and plowed along seventy or eighty feet. Scores of people were badly shaken up, but the coaches and parlor cars did not leave the rails, and no one was injured. Traffic on the westbound track was blocked for several hours.

Several Persons Hurt.

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 6.—Several passengers and an engineer were reported injured to-day in the wreck of Santa Fe train No. 17, near Salina, three miles from Temple.

Fourteen Persons Injured.

BLYTHESVILLE, Ark., Oct. 6.—Fourteen persons were injured, five seriously, when a southbound passenger train on the Frisco railroad collided with a freight train near Blytheville.

SOMERVILLE OPPOSES ELEVATED ROAD

While citizens of Medford want an elevated conection with Sullivan square, citizens of Somerville, through which city the structure would have to pass, said "No" very emphatically at the joint hearing of the Railroad Commission and the Boston Transit Commission at the State House.

Mayor Wood said he appeared by direction of the Somerville Board of Aldermen, and Chairman Amos R. Shepherd of that body also spoke against the road.

For Medford, Mayor Brewer said a subway would be an impossibility and that better service was needed by his city. City Solicitor Elder and W. W. Fifield also urged the building of an elevated.

GIRL WHO, FATHER SAYS, WAS STOLEN BY SWEETHEART

ALICE CLARK.

FIGHT TO TAKE HIS GIRL FROM BOY HUSBAND

Thomas Clark of No. 10 Williams street, Waltham, to-day consults his attorney, with a view to securing an annulment of the marriage of his fourteen-year-old daughter Alice and Alec Theodora, twenty-three years of age. The young couple eloped to Manchester, N. H., where a justice of the peace married them.

The news of the marriage, though it brought grief to the father, somewhat relieved his anguish, for it is now more than a week since the girl disappeared, and it was feared that she had met with foul play. It was on September 25 that the girl vanished. She had nothing with her except the clothes she wore and she told no one of her intentions.

It is understood that on that day she met Theodora, who formerly worked in the Boston Manufacturing Company mill with her, and who had gone to Fall River about a month ago, and with him went to Pittsfield, where they spent a few days. Then they went to Manchester, where they were married, and from there to Lewiston, the home of Theodora's parents. They are thought to be in Lewiston now.

PEARY'S COLORED SERVANT BANQUETED

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Matt Henson, Commander Peary's negro servant, who stood with him at the North Pole, was honored by being made one of the guests at a dinner in the Union League Club, in Fifth avenue, one of the most aristocratic in the world.

Officers and the scientific staff of the Roosevelt were invited.

Their host was Charles F. Cox, a prominent railroad man and an active member of the New York Academy of Sciences.

Commander Peary was not present, as he is now in Maine and it is his intention to accept no public honors and no invitations of any kind until he is satisfied that the so-called Cook-Peary controversy has been decided.

TRAIN HITS COW; PLUNGES INTO RIVER

PETERSBURG, N. Y., Oct. 6.—A cow on the track caused the engine of a milk train on the Chatham branch of the Rutland railroad to plunge into Little Hoosick river within two and a half miles of this place causing the death of Fireman William Moses and the probable fatal injuries of Engineer Chauncey Gould. One milk car followed the engine over the embankment but a passenger and a mail coach remained on the rails. Outside the engine crew no one was hurt.

118 CIVIL SUITS IN CAMBRIDGE FOR BIG SUMS

One hundred and eighteen civil suits were filed to-day in the office of the clerk of the Superior Court at East Cambridge.

The largest damage asked in the suit against the American Powder Mills of Boston for $150,000, brought by Paul Butler and Blanche Butler Ames of Lowell in an action of contract. This suit is an outcome of the big explosion which wrecked part of the town of Tewksbury in July 29, 1903.

The American Powder Mills brings a counter suit against Paul Butler and Blanche Butler Ames of Lowell for $125,000 in an action of contract claiming that they have paid to settle suits against them the sum of $107,556.65.

Three suits totalling $28,000 have been filed against the Boston L as a result of collision in the subway between Pleasant and Parks streets on July 28, 1909. The first suit is for $20,000 by Miss Margaret Davis of Somerville, a minor, through her father Michael F. Davis. The father sues for $5,000 for loss of his daughter's services. John J. Cody of Somerville asks $3,000 for loss of services of his daughter, Mary V. Cody.

Henry H. Hull of Boston is sued for $85,000 in an action of contract by Judge Charles J. McIntire of the Probate Court at East Cambridge. He alleges that on February 24, 1903, Hull was appointed administrator of the late William H. Hull of Lowell and that he gave bond of $80,000 as security. Judge McIntire asks that this bond be forfeited.

IRISH BISHOP LAUDS CONDON

CLONMEL, Ire., Oct. 6.—Captain O'Meagher Condon received the freedom of five Irish cities in three days, Kilkenny Saturday night, Dublin Monday, and Wexford, Waterford and Clonmel yesterday.

He has now received the freedom of every Irish nationalist city, only Belfast and Derry, controlled by anti-nationalists, failing to vote him the honor. The series of honors is unprecedented except in the cases of Parnell and Redmond.

Condon's speeches have made a remarkable impression by their practical and common sense character.

Mayors Sinnot of Wexford, Whittle of Waterford and Cahill of Clonmel conferred the honor. The unanimous vote of the respective city governments of Wexford and Clonmel voted the freedom of the city to O'Callaghan.

Bishop O'Dea of Galway yesterday wrote Mr. O'Callaghan, saying: "Permit me as an Irish bishop to thank you and Capt. Condon for the splendid services you have recently been rendering to the cause of Ireland. The spirit of the nation is still unbroken. Everywhere there is progress, and this we owe largely to Irish America."

KING EDWARD TAKES HAND IN BUDGET WAR

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The critical situation through which Great Britain is passing, due to the momentous questions involved over the new budget, resulted to-day in a six-hour conference between Premier Asquith and King Edward at Balmoral Castle. The Premier was summoned by telegraph and left the House of Commons in the middle of a very important debate.

King Edward is taking a keener interest in the political and economic affairs of England than ever before in his reign. He confers frequently with members of his ministry on vital affairs of state. He is attempting to feel the pulse of his nation through the press, and satisfy to some extent the demand of both the aristocrats and the poor people.

The course of King Edward is a very difficult one. With the rich on one hand clamoring for an elimination from the budget of the tax clauses which will mulct them heavily, the poor people are jubilant at the prospect of their tax burdens being lightened. Vast influences have been brought to bear and the outcome will make new conditions in England.

NEW CLEW TO MISSING GIRL

Private detectives and the police of Lowell are searching that city for Miss Elizabeth G. Johnson, niece of Prof. Thomas E. Pope of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and an asistant librarian of the institution, who disapeared from her home, No. 194 Canton street, on August 12.

The Lowell clue is the last in a long series that has proved fruitless. A woman neighbor of Professor Pope says she saw Miss Johnson in Lowell on August 10, two days before her disappearance, and this coupled with the fact that a Lowell time-table of this year was found in Miss Johnson's papers sugests the possibility that she may have gone there. Her brother, Henry G. Johnson, is conducting the search.

WASHTUB WILL CASE IS AGAIN PUT OVER

When the proponents of the will of the late Patrick Monahan of Charlestown appeared in the Supreme Court before Judge Braley on their appeal from the decree of the Probate Court, which recently disallowed the instrument, Attorney Breath, who has but lately come into the case, asked the court for more time to prepare to prove the will.

As representing the proponents, he claimed that if the case was given a little more chance, he could locate important witnesses in New Jersey. Judge Braley gave him until October 26 to do this with the understanding that if he was not prepared to prove the will on that date the decree of the Probate Court would be affirmed.

'DEWEY A MUTTOCRAT' HISGEN DECLARES

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 6.—Thomas L. Hisgen of West Springfield, Independence party candidate for President last Fall, is at a loss to understand the announcement from Boston that Judge Henry S. Dewey was "secretly" nominated for Governor by the League last week. "Why, there hasn't been any convention of the League," said Mr. Hisgen, "and nobody has been nominated. Judge Dewey isn't an Independence party man, as I understand it. He's a—a—a 'theocrat,' 'autocrat,' 'muttocrat,' or something like that. I'll support Vahey and Foss, and vote for them."

NEVER AGAIN IS VERDICT ON WAR GAMES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Joint manoeuvres of the regular army and of national guard are a thing of the past; at least there will be no repetition of the recent Boston campaign, as long as the present directing forces in the war department are in control.

Some valuable lessons were learned in that period of stress and privation, but the cost in human suffering is held by the war department officials to have been out of all proportion to the benefits derived.

And, besides, they are now convinced that all of real utility that was taught to the militiamen could just as well have been imparted through other means and without filling the hospital cots during the campaign and without causing the dreary lists of absentees on company roll call in the national guard armories since then, attributable to sickness extending over weeks after the return of the militiamen from the field.

On Ankle—It Was Very Bad and Only Got Worse Under Treatments—Cuticura Soon Healed It—Baby's Head Freed from Stubborn Scurf by Cuticura Soap.

TWO ECONOMICAL CURES BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"My case was a very bad ulcer sore on my ankle and I was laid up three months with it. I was reading an advertisement in the newspaper one day about the Cuticura Remedies so I purchased a cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and a large bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. After using one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment my ulcer was healed, by washing twice a day with the Soap and using the other remedies as directed. Before I used the Cuticura Remedies my sore was getting worse all the time under other treatments. Furthermore we have a baby boy here and we have found that Cuticura Soap has been a fine thing for him. He had scurf on his head and we tried every way to remove it but failed until we used the Cuticura Soap which removed it almost at once. George M. Hall, Brushton, N. Y., Dec. 24, 1908."

TAFT OFF TO 'ROUGH IT' IN THE YOSEMITE

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6.—President Taft wound up his triumphant march through the bay cities at 8:40 a. m. to-day when he boarded his special train for the short run to the Yosemite valley. The first stop was made at Modesto, where a large crowd gave the President a rousing reception. Mr. Taft responded with a few remarks touching on local conditions, and then conversed with those who were gathered about the car platform. He is looking eagerly forward to his stay in the valley. His desire is to rough it as much as possible, and a climb afoot to the top of the glacier point, a distance of six miles, is one of the things on the presidential program. The President arose this morning greatly refreshed after a good night's sleep at the St. Francis Hotel. He again expressed his appreciation of the splendid reception given him in San Francisco and surrounding cities.

It was one of the busiest days the President has had since the trip began. The crowning glory of his visit—the thing that brought him nearest the hearts of Californians, was his address at the Fairmont Hotel banquet when he declared flatly and forcibly for a ship subsidy to encourage an American marine.

He said that subsidy must first meet the difference in condition of cost and employment that our laws force upon our shipowners when meeting the competition of the owners of foreign shippers. Then that subsidy must equal the subsidies given by other nations in the encouragement of their merchant ships.

"We have gotten along in a wonderful way in increasing our international trade without any merchant marine at all," he said.

"But that is no argument and no reason for saying we might not have made greater strides and might not have directed that trade much more intelligently had we had the ships that helped us to carry that trade to the foreign countries."

More AMERICANS are read in the homes in Boston than any other paper.

AIRSHIP SHOW TO BE 1915 FAIR FEATURE

From arrangements just completed, it is evident that the aviation department of the "1915" Boston Exposition, when it opens in the old Art Museum, November 1, will be one of the most interesting sections of what promises to be a strikingly interesting show.

In addition to the American Curtiss airship or biplane, which won the European aviation prizes in France and Italy during the recent air races, for which a contract was signed by the "1915" Exposition management several weeks ago, there are to be several notable models.

NEW "HALF-MOON" GOES TO BROOKLYN

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Brooklyn is to have the reproduction of the Half Moon which was presented to the Hudson-Fulton Celebration Commission by the Celebration Commission of the Netherlands. It has been decided that the quaint old boat on its return from the upper Hudson shall be turned over to the Park Department in Brooklyn and shall thereafter be kept in the big lake in Prospect Park, where all who wish may see it. What shall be done with the reproduction of the Clermont has not been decided definitely as yet.

FIRE A BLAST AND SEE WOMAN JUMP!

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 6.—Vice-Chancellor Walker to-day ordered the Delaware River Quarry & Construction Company to set off a heavy blast in its quarries next Saturday at noon to test the effect on the nerves of Mrs. Eva L. Pareat, who complains that the heavy blasts rack her nerves and make her life miserable. She wants the blasting stopped. The Vice-Chancellor ordered that the blast be fired and that a Master in Chancery, with stenographer and one expert on each side, be present to note the effect on the woman and on her property.

A Scientific Remedy

THAT RELIEVES EVERY FORM OF SKIN TROUBLE.

Doctors are often sorely perplexed in determining what to call many of the common diseases of the skin. One authority says there are at least twenty different forms of eczema alone, and it is a general practice to call it eczema whenever there is a scaly crust upon the skin, accompanied by itching. Just what causes this terribly annoying and stubborn disease would be difficult to say. The truth is that skin diseases generally have been very little understood. For years they were thought to be blood disorders. A short time ago there was discovered a new compound called Cadum, which, when applied externally, effected the most astonishing results in all forms of eczema and other skin troubles of a minor kind. This proved that eczema is not the result of disordered blood, but is a skin disease beyond question. Before the discovery of Cadum other external remedies without number were used, but proved of value only where the attack was mild and recent. It is less than one year since Cadum was discovered, and in that time cures almost beyond belief have been brought about in not only deep-seated cases of eczema, but in all forms of skin troubles as well. If you could have seen some of the horribly disfigured and blotched faces and bodies that Cadum has cleared up and restored to a perfectly healthy condition, you would think the day of miracles had returned, but there is no miracle about Cadum whatever. It is a scientific remedy discovered after long study of skin diseases, and it is most reassuring to be told that it contains no poisonous substance. It is for children and adults, and its remarkable virtues are felt after the first application. The itching stops at once and the healing process is rapid and unmistakable. Cadum is sold by druggists at 10c and 25c. a box. It is for pimples, rash, blotches, blackheads, chafings, rough, scaly skin, ringworm, herpes, acne, and other troubles of that kind.

Doctors' Fees to Be Increased in Paris.

PARIS—Doctors in Paris and vicinity have decided to raise their fees for medical attendance on a date shortly to be set. They claim that the increase in the cost of living during recent years necessitates this step. The minimum fee for visiting a patient at home will be four francs, and for consultation three francs. Higher fees will naturally remain a matter to be settled between doctor and patient. Dr. Grunberg, formerly member of the council of the Doctors' Federation, said that the proposed increase of fees was perfectly justifiable. Dr. Grunberg said that in deciding them doctors should take into account the following points:

1. Seriousness of the illness or operation.
2. Patient's means.
3. Loss of time and difficulties encountered with respect to hours of visits.
4. Number of visits.
5. Relative eminence of medical men.

STILL DIG FOR MAN BURIED THREE DAYS

CENTRAL ISLIP, N. Y., Oct. 6.—After three days of unceasing work, the men and women who have been digging at the tons of earth that cover John Cossens at the foot of a sixty-foot well, to-day seem far from the end of their work. Women have gone without sleep to help the relays of men who handled the shovels, and they themselves have taken up the task of manual labor in the hope of saving Cossens.

But there is little hope left to-day, and even the father of the victim despairs.

BASEBALL ON SUNDAY? WHAT DO YOU SAY?

How about Sunday baseball in Boston? Do you favor it?

Tell just what you think about it in letters of not more than 100 words. Sunday baseball is popular in the West? Would it be popular here? Here are few of hundreds of opinions.

GET RECREATION IN PARKS.

Editor AMERICAN:

The only argument that I have ever heard in favor of Sunday baseball is that it gives the people a chance to get out in the open air and enjoy themselves. Such an argument in Boston is hardly worth considering. We have here the finest park system in the world, and one who cannot get fresh air and recreation in some spot in the Metropolitan system is in a sad state, indeed. Where I was brought up we were taught that Sunday was a day on which man turned to his better thoughts and finer instincts. Why turn it into a day of umpire-baiting?

WILLIAM W. O'HIGGINS.
South Boston.

ELIMINATES OTHER EVILS.

Editor AMERICAN:

Sunday baseball would be as good as going to church; men and boys could enjoy themselves. It would help keep them from gambling, from going to hotels and getting drunk and hanging on street corners.

HARRY JONES.
North Brighton.

"ARE WE DRIFTING?"

Editor AMERICAN:

Sunday baseball is wrong according to the revealed Word of God. Sunday is a day of rest and should be remembered and kept holy. The apostacy of the church has brought about in a great measure Sunday desecration as it exists to-day. When the church will cleanse itself of worldly pleasure and preach the gospel without perversion, as Jesus Christ commanded, Sunday baseball playing and its sidelights would vanish and the people would find pleasure in attending divine worship. The masses have no interest in listening to the learned essays of men buried from our pulpits to-day; we as a nation are drifting away from God. Church entertainments and banqueting are far worse than Sunday baseball.

R. C. CRABTREE.
Lynn.

ANSWER THIS, YOU PLAY-GOERS.

Editor AMERICAN:

To those who object to Sunday baseball, and who are ardent theatre-goers, I would ask: Suppose that theatrical shows could be given by daylight only? Would you then be opposed to Sunday opening of theatres? Attending a ball game not only means a half day's pay lost, but risking a good job as well.

H. ROSENBLUM.
75 Ruthven street, Roxbury.

OH, THIS HEN-PECKED CITY.

Editor AMERICAN:

I believe that the present law prohibiting Sunday baseball does not meet with public approval. Baseball as it is played to-day is without doubt the cleanest sport in America, furnishing healthful exercise for the player, amateur or professional, and pleasant recreation for thousands of enthusiastic followers of the game.

To follow the example of our western brothers and amend the present law would be a great boon to our hen-pecked city and for that reason I trust the members of the "Boston 1915" committee will make Sunday baseball an issue in their campaign for a bigger, better and busier Boston.

CLARA CLEMENS, BRIDE OF NOTED RUSSIAN PIANIST

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, who married Mark Twain's daughter to-day.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN WANTS is to enhance her beauty. The SUNDAY AMERICAN will contain a page of invaluable information by Mme. Cavalieri. Recipes that every woman needs.

MARK TWAIN'S DAUGHTER IS NOW A BRIDE

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Miss Clara L. Clemens, daughter of Samuel L. Clemens, better known as "Mark Twain," was married to-day to Ossip Gabrilowitsch, a Russian pianist, who hails from St. Petersburg. The ceremony took place at Mark Twain's country place at Redding Ridge, Ct. The Rev. Dr. Joseph H. Twitchell of Hartford was the officiating clergyman. The bride's father gave her away, and her younger sister, Jean, attended her. There were no flower girls or other attendants.

The house, which contains no pictures on the walls, on account of Mark Twain's theory that the natural pictures framed by the window casements are better, is profusely decorated with the substance of those natural pictures gathered from the surrounding Autumn woods. About fifty guests were invited for the ceremony and the wedding breakfast. Immediately after the wedding breakfast the bride and groom leave for New York, and later they will sail for an extensive tour abroad.

STARTLING NEW DISCOVERY will be made by readers of that master mystery story, "Who Killed Professor Greer," in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

MILLIONAIRE AND WORKMAN RIVALS

A millionaire automobile manufacturer and a journeyman carpenter are opposing candidates for selectman at a special election at Hyde Park to-day. The contestants are John T. Robinson, of the Pope-Robinson Company, and John W. McAsee, a carpenter. They are fighting for the place vacated by George B. French, who resigned three months after his election because of the lack of harmony in the board. McAsee was a member of the board in 1908 and was defeated for re-election the following year. Candidate Robinson has a score of his autos at work to-day bringing out the vote. McAsee has none.

ROBBERS LOOT AUTO STORE IN SOUTH END

Three men forced the front door of the store of Brophy & Barrabee, dealers in auto supplies, at No. 46 Columbus avenue, early to-day, and stole four China dogskin automobile coats with rat collars, all valued at $400. The men were seen leaving the building by a watchman in a neighboring building, who told a policeman, but the men escaped.

The watchman furnished an accurate description of the trio, and the police are now searching for them. It is believed they are chauffeurs.

GOOD SALES REPORTED IN REAL ESTATE

Though not aggregating such a large volume as yesterday some good sales were reported to-day in the real estate market.

Charles L. Scudder et ux. have sold to Alanson Bigelow, trustee, the property at No. 180 Beacon street, between Berkeley and Clarendon streets, which comprises a four-story brick and stone residence and 2,128 square feet of land. This estate is taxed on a total valuation of $21,500, of which $12,800 is on the land. The new purchaser will improve and occupy.

Another Dorchester parcel sold is on Wayanoke street near Carruth street, being a lot of land containing 1,400 square feet, assessed for $700. It has been purchased by George H. Bowles from Jame B. Rice.

Gerald J. Savage of the Old South building, who is conducting the development of "North Weymouth Bluffs," reports good demand for home lots in this newly-opened suburban tract. Though his offering to home seekers and investors of lots at this popular location for new homes is comparatively new, a large number of lots have been sold. He reports the following sales made within the past few days at North Weymouth Bluffs: To Mary M. Wilde, lot No. 84; to Simon A. Delorey, lot No. 123, and this purchaser has also taken an option on lot No. 120; to William Sharp, Jr., lot No. 275, who will build for occupancy at once; to Simond Duncan, lot No. 286, which has a frontage on the shore, and who will build for occupancy immediately; to James Shepard, lot No. 79; to Richard G. Kilduff, lot No. 274, and to B. Watts, lots Nos. 21 and 22.

PASTOR DONS OVERALLS TO PAINT CHURCH

LYNN, Oct. 6.—The Rev. L. Williams Adams, the new pastor of the St. Luke's M. E. Church on Oakwood avenue, this city, is setting an example of industry and economy for his flock. He has donned overalls and is leading a number of the congregation in the work of re-decorating the church and painting its exterior.

The Rev. Mr. Adams is far from being ashamed to work with his hands. Although a member of the profession regarded as the most sacred he believes in the nobility of manual labor.

He recently came to the Lynn church from Beverly. The Lynn church is not attended by the wealthy. The new pastor believed it would help it if the edifice were made more attractive. So he put on overalls and took up the paint brush. He said:

"Where there is work to do it should be done. It helps the church and stimulates interest among the congregation if the church is made beautiful. This parish is poor and cannot afford to pay a big bill. I felt called upon to take the initiative and lead in the work of making this house of worship more attractive to the eye. I ordered and I have mixed the paints.

"I never worked at the painter's trade, but fifteen years ago when I was pastor of a Swampscott church I decorated its interior and my work is in evidence there yet. I have been pastor of several churches where the congregations were mostly poor people and have been something of a jack-of-all trades in my desire to do my duty.

"A clergyman does not lessen his dignity by wearing overalls. Any labor that is honest is never lowly."

THREE MEN WRECK CHICAGO GAS PLANT

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Three men early to-day tried to blow up the South Chicago plant of the People's Light and Coke Company. They entered the engine room, which is still uncompleted, bound and gagged Engineer John Sullivan, and after carrying him out, exploded nitroglycerin under the exhaust engine. The engine was destroyed. The men escaped.

PRESIDENT LOWELL, IN INAUGURAL, DEFENDS COLLEGE ATHLETICS

President Lowell's Views Told at Harvard Inaugural

THE best type of an educated man is one who knows a little of everything and something well.

College instructors believe that the object of college is study; many students fancy it is mainly enjoyment.

The most painful defect in the American college at the present time is the lack of esteem for excellence in scholarship.

I believe strongly in the physical and moral value of athletic sports and of intercollegiate contests conducted in a spirit of generous rivalry.

Freshmen should be brought together in a group of dormitories and dining halls under the comradeship of older men.

A greater solidarity in college, more earnestness of purpose and intellectual enthusiasm would mean much for our nation.

ration and the presidents and delegates from other universities, and said:

"Mr. President of the Board of Overseers—It is with a deep sense of responsibility that I receive at your hands these symbols of the office to which the governing board has chosen me. You have laid on me a trust second to none for the education of American youth and therefore for the intellectual and moral welfare of our country. I pray that I may be granted the strength, wisdom and patience to no common degree in order that Harvard shall stand as she has stood through the long years for the development of truer manhood and for the advancement of sound learning, that her sons may go forth with a clearer resolve, and that their moral being shall be better for the years that they have spent within these walls."

Then after the singing of a hymn by a chorus of graduates began his inaugural address.

In this long-expected announcement of his plans, President Lowell emphasized his faith and belief in the ancient ideals of Harvard. He declared that while he believes "strongly in the physical and moral value of intercollegiate sports," he would mainly strive to awaken an interest, zest and enthusiasm among the students for intellectual achievements.

President Lawrence in his inaugural address referred to Cook and Peary in this language:

"The public is more prone to follow and honor a man who has made geographical discoveries and explorations than the man who makes discoveries in other scientific lines, such as chemistry and medicine."

Following President Lowell's address came the conferring of the thirty honorary degrees upon the distinguished guests of the university. Those receiving degrees included James Bryce, British Ambassador to the United States; President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, New York; President Jacob Gould Schurman of Cornell and President Judson of the University of Chicago.

President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot, who has presided over the University for the past forty years, was seated at the front of the great rostrum, but took no active part in the formal exercises. He presided this afternoon for the first time over the Alumni Association at its meeting in Memorial Hall.

To-night, after the Symphony Orchestra concert in Sanders Theatre, comes the big torchlight and red fire celebration of the inauguration in the Stadium by the student body.

The exercises to-day began at 10:30 o'clock. The delegates from American and foreign universities, over 800 in number, were seated in a long, open air rostrum which had been built in front of University Hall. At 9:30 the procession of officers and members of the university faculties formed at Phillips Brooks house at one corner of the yard, and headed by a band and by Chief Marshal Thomas Nelson Perkins began its slow and dignified march across to the rostrum. In the meantime the yard was filled with graduates and their wives, students and guests of the university.

The scene on the rostrum was most picturesque, all of the delegates from the universities wearing their black academic robes set off by blue and scarlet hoods. Governor Draper and his military staff added a touch of golden color to the picture.

Began With Hymn.

It was nearly 11 o'clock when the inaugural exercises began with the singing of a Latin hymn (Lad Laudate Dominum) by the men's chorus of graduates of the university. The program then proceeded as follows:

Prayer......The Dean of the Faculty of Divinity
Oration in Latin......Lester Burton Struthers, senior
Induction of the president......
The President of the Board of Overseers
Response......The President
Choral: Domine Salvum Fac Praesidem Nostrum (Gounod)......The Alumni Chorus
Inaugural address......The President
Choral: Great Is Jehovah (Schubert)......
The Alumni Chorus
Conferring of honorary degrees......The President
Benediction......
Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, D.D., LL.D., D.C.L.

At 8 o'clock there will be a concert in Sanders Theatre by the Symphony Orchestra, to be attended by many notable guests.

While the inaugural procession and ceremony are the main features of the day's program, the students' celebration at the stadium in the evening promises to be an event no less spectacular.

To-day's impressive exercises began with the procession from Phillips Brooks House to University Hall. It was a magnificent scene of life and color that was presented as the long line wended its way through the old yard to the platform.

The procession marched from Holden Chapel toward Thayer Hall, wheeled to the right at the east path of the yard and follow that path to the platform.

When the procession arrived at the platform and its members had been seated under the direction of the chief marshal, his aids and the marshals, the assemblage was called to order by Sheriff Fairbairn of Middlesex. The alumni chorus, which occupied a platform in front of the main platform, sang Converse's hymn, "Laudate Dominum," written two years ago for the Harvard Medical School celebration. The other hymns were those that were used at the inauguration of President Eliot forty years ago and in previous inaugurations.

Sick Headache and Indigestion

The Former Is Very Frequently Caused by the Other.

The pneumo-gastric nerve connects the stomach region directly with the brain, and when the stomach is out of order the head is almost certain to be affected through reflex or sympathetic nervous irritation.

The headache of dyspepsia and indigestion is of every variety from the dullest and least defined to the most acute pain. Sometimes the whole mass of the brain seems racked with anguish; at others, the ache is confined to the back or front part of the head. The first form is usually of a confused character, and is often accompanied by dimness of vision and a mild vertigo, or so-called "rush of blood to the head." The victims of this symptom complain of a "swimming" or "lightness" in the head, and dizziness, or a sensation of motion while the body is still, and specks or flashes of light before the eyes.

Persons subject to indigestion and other forms of stomach trouble are very frequent sufferers from headache, and in numerous cases a sick headache is the only noticeable symptom of indigestion present; in others, there are stomach manifestations as well.

The majority of people regard this headache as a separate disease, instead of a symptom of stomach-disease, which it usually is; and they attempt to treat it separately, and make the mistake of endeavoring to obtain relief through the use of headache powders, tablets, pills and seltzers, the use of which is extremely dangerous, as many of them contain such powerful depressent drugs as acetanilid, phenacetine, antipyrine, caffeine, etc., which depress the heart, brain and nerve centers, and lower arterial pressure; and many a person with a weak heart has become dangerously ill shortly after taking one of these headache remedies. They also interfere with the digestive processes and actually make the dyspepsia worse than before.

In order to get rid of the headache of indigestion—and most headaches are caused by stomach trouble—one should endeavor to reach and remove the cause, and the headache effect will soon be relieved.

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS do not cure the symptoms, they cure the cause of the headache, which permanently removes the symptoms. They digest every atom of food in the stomach, cure all forms of stomach trouble, and the headache, and every other disagreeable symptom and untoward effect is quickly gotten rid of.

Don't make the mistake of trying to cure your dyspeptic or nervous headache through the use of headache powders, tablets, etc. Use common sense, good judgment and one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and you will be agreeably surprised at the rapidity with which the headache will be relieved and cured simultaneously with the relief and cure of the stomach disturbance.

Purchase a package from your druggist to-day for 50 cents, and send us your name and address, and we will forward you a trial package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

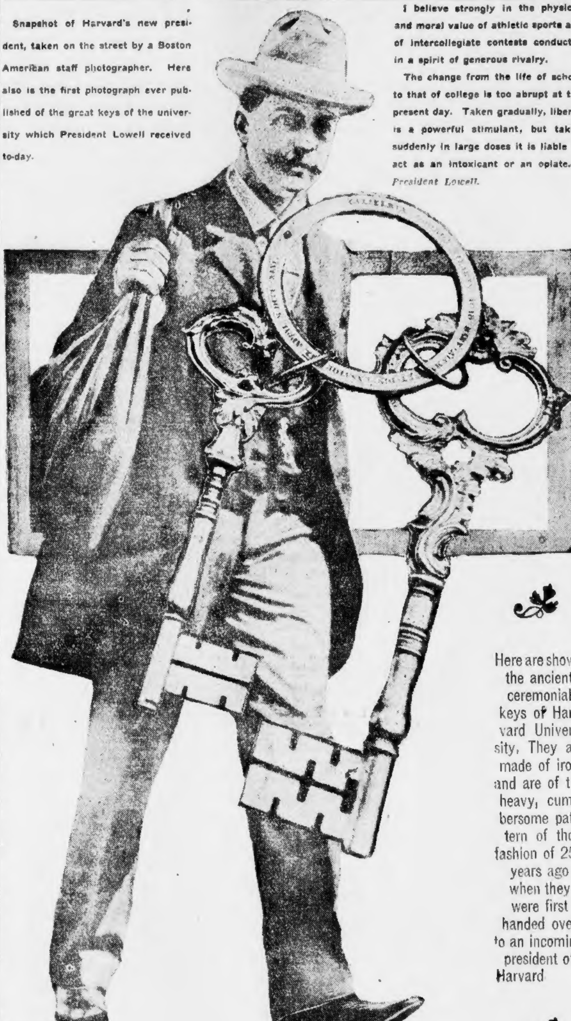
Pres. Abbott Lawrence Lowell and Harvard's Ancient Keys

Snapshot of Harvard's new president, taken on the street by a Boston American staff photographer. Here also is the first photograph ever published of the great keys of the university which President Lowell received to-day.



I believe strongly in the physical and moral value of athletic sports and of intercollegiate contests conducted in a spirit of generous rivalry.

The change from the life of school to that of college is too abrupt at the present day. Taken gradually, liberty is a powerful stimulant, but taken suddenly in large doses it is liable to act as an intoxicant or an opiate.—President Lowell.

LOWELL GIVES HIS COLLEGE VIEWS IN INAUGURAL SPEECH

Following is an abstract of President Lowell's inaugural address:

I believe strongly in the physical and moral value of athletic sports, and of intercollegiate contests conducted in a spirit of generous rivalry; and I do not believe that their exaggerated prominence at the present day is to be attributed to a conviction on the part of the undergraduates, or of the public, that physical is more valuable than mental force. It is due rather to the fact that such contests offer to students the one common interest, the only striking occasion for a display of college solidarity.

One theory, often broached under different forms, and more or less logically held, is that the main object of the college should be to prepare for the study of a definite profession, or the practice of a distinct occupation; and that the subjects pursued should, for the most part, be such as will furnish the knowledge immediately useful for that end. But if so, would it not be better to transfer all instruction of this kind to the professional schools, reducing the age of entrance thereto, and leaving the general studies for a college course of diminished length, or perhaps surrendering them altogether to the secondary schools?

Task of the College.

The task before us is to frame a system which, without sacrificing individual variations too much, or neglecting the pursuit of different scholarly interests, shall produce an intellectual and social cohesion, at least among large groups of students, and points of contact among them all. This task is not confined to any one college, although more urgent in the case of those that have grown the largest and have been moving most rapidly.

It has been truly said that few men are capable of learning a new subject after the period of youth has passed, and hence the graduates ought to be so equipped that he can grasp effectively any problem with which his duties or his interest may impel him to deal. An undergraduate, addicted mainly to the classics, recently spoke to his adviser in an apologetic tone of having elected a course in natural science, which he feared was narrowing. Such a state of mind is certainly deplorable, for in the present age some knowledge of the laws of nature is an essential part of the mental outfit which no cultivated man should lack.

He need not know much, but he ought to know enough to learn more. To him the forces of nature ought not to be an occult mystery, but a chain of causes and effects with which, if not wholly familiar, he can at least claim acquaintance; and the same principle applies to every other leading branch of knowledge.

I speak of the equipment, rather than the education, of a college graduate, because, as we are often reminded, his education ought to cease only with his life, and hence his equipment ought to lay a strong foundation for that education. It ought to teach him what it means to master a subject, and it ought to enable him to seize and retain information of every kind from that unending stream that flows past every man who has the eyes to see it. Moreover, it ought to be such that he is capable of turning his mind effectively to direct preparation for his life work whatever the profession or occupation he may select.

Harvard Aims High.

Any young man who has brains, and has learned to use them, can master the law, whatever his intellectual interests may have been; and the same thing is true of the curriculum in the Divinity School. Many professors of medicine, on the other hand, feel strongly that a student should enter their school with at least a rudimentary knowledge of those sciences, like chemistry, biology and physiology, which are interwoven with medical studies; and they appear to attach greater weight to this than to his natural capacity or general attainments.

Now that we have established graduate schools of engineering and business administration, we must examine this question carefully in the immediate future. If the college courses are strictly untechnical, the requirement of a small number of electives in certain subjects as a condition for entering a graduate professional school is not inconsistent with a liberal education. But I will acknowledge a prejudice that for a man who is destined to reach the top of his profession, a broad education and a firm grasp of some subject lying outside of his vocation is a vast advantage, and we must not forget that in substantially confining the professional schools at Harvard to college graduates we are aiming at the higher strata in the professions.

We have heard much of the benefit obtained merely by breathing the college atmosphere, or rubbing against the college walls. I fear the walls about us have little of the virtue of Aladdin's lamp when rubbed. What we mean is that daily association with other young men whose minds are alert is in itself a large part of a liberal education. But to what extent do undergraduates talk over things intellectual, and especially matters brought before them by their courses of study?

Best Kind of Education.

It is the ambition of every earnest teacher so to stimulate his pupils that they will discuss outside the classroom the problems he has presented to them. The students in the law school talk law interminably. They take a fierce pleasure in debating legal points in season and out. This is not wholly with a prospect of bread and butter in the years to come, nor because law is intrinsically more interesting than other things. Much must no doubt be ascribed to the skill of the faculty of the Law School in awakening a keen competitive delight in solving a legal problem; but there is also the vital fact that all these young men are tilling the same field. They have their stock of knowledge in common.

A discussion of the ideal college training from these three different aspects—the highest development of the individual student, the proper relation of the college to the professional school, the relation of the students to one another—would appear to lead in each case to the same conclusion, that the best type of liberal education in our complex modern world aims at producing men who know a little of everything and something well.

American college students ought also to study a little of everything, for if not there is no certainty that they will be broadly cultivated, especially in view of the omnipresent impulse in the community driving them to devote their chief attention to the subjects bearing upon their future career. The wise policy for them would appear to be that of devoting a considerable portion of their time to some one subject and taking in addition a number of general courses in wholly unrelated fields.

Horizon Should Be Wide.

But instruction that imparts a little knowledge of everything is more difficult to provide well than any other. To furnish it there ought to be in every considerable field a general course, designed to give to men who do not intend to pursue the subject further a comprehension of its underlying principles or methods of thought; and this is by no means the same thing as an introductory course, although the two can often be effectively combined.

A large college ought to give its students a wide horizon, and it fails therein unless it mixes them together so thoroughly that the friendships they form are based on natural affinities, rather than similarity of origin. Now these ties are formed most rapidly at the threshold of college life, and the set in which a man shall move is mainly determined in his freshman year. It is obviously desirable, therefore, that the freshmen should be thrown together more than they are now.

Moreover, the change from the life of school to that of college is too abrupt at the present day. Taken gradually, liberty is a powerful stimulant; but taken suddenly, in large doses, it is liable to act as an intoxicant or an opiate.

Some Students Submerged.

No doubt every boy ought to learn to paddle his own canoe, but we do not begin the process by tossing him into a canoe and setting him adrift in deep water with a caution that he would do well to look for the paddle. Many a well-intentioned youth who comes to college enjoys, innocently enough, the pleasures of freedom for a season, but released from the discipline to which he has been accustomed, and looking on the examinations as remote, falls into indolent habits. Presently he finds himself on probation for neglect of his studies. He has become submerged, and has a hard, perhaps unsuccessful, struggle to get his head above water.

It would seem that all these difficulties could be much lessened if the freshmen were brought together in a group of dormitories and dining halls, under the comradeship of older men, who appreciated the possibilities of college life and took a keen interest in their work and their pleasures. Such a plan would enable us also to recruit our students younger, for the present age of entrance here appears to be due less to the difficulty of preparing for the examination earlier, than to the nature of the life the freshman leads. Complaints of the age of graduation cause a pressure to reduce the length of the college course, and with it the standard of the college degree.

If the mass of undergraduates could be brought to respect, nay, to admire, intellectual achievement on the part of their comrades in at all the measure that they do athletic victory; if those among them of natural ability could be led to put forth their strength on the objects which the college is supposed to represent, the professional schools would find their tasks lightened and their success enhanced.

A greater solidarity in college, more earnestness of purpose and intellectual enthusiasm would mean much for our nation. It is said that if the temperature of the ocean were raised the water would expand until the floods covered the dry land; and if we can increase the intellectual ambition of college students the whole face of our country will be changed. When the young men shall see visions, the dreams of the old men will come true.

WRONG GIRL GOT BLOW

While two young women were walking up Columbus avenue near Dartmouth street a man stepped out of a doorway and after a few words with the shorter of the two aimed a savage blow at her. The man's fist missed the smaller woman and landed square on the nose of the taller companion, who fell in a heap on the ground. The man then started away on the run and disappeared.

Julia Clark, twenty-four years old, of No. 72 Waltham street, was the injured woman, and Lottie Cheney of 211 West Springfield street, was her companion. She refused to give the name of the man. Both said they knew him, however. He is said to have been the sweetheart of Miss Cheney.

FEAR 14-YEAR-OLD GIRL HAS ELOPED

MENDON, Oct. 6.—The disappearance of Miss Vera Mary Wilson, fourteen years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wilson of Mendon, and the disappearance of George Thomas, twenty years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas, with whom the Wilson girl has been keeping company, has lead their parents to believe they have eloped. They have requested Deputy Sheriff Snow to arrest the couple and their descriptions have been sent to Worcester, Brockton and Boston. The young people disappeared Monday night. Thomas is a long distance runner and is entered in the Marathon races at the Brockton fair.

MISS ANDERSON OF DORCHESTER WEDS

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives Miss Ida Grace Anderson of Dorchester and Mr. Alfred Joslyn Burdett of Brookline, Harvard, '98, were married at noon to-day at the home of Mrs. Elliot W. Rogers, sister of the bride, No. 11 Parkman street, Dorchester, by Rev. George H. Flint. The bride wore a traveling dress of blue broadcloth and blue hat with plumes. Miss Jessie Edith Rogers, gowned in pink voile, was maid of honor, and Harold William Burdett of Leominster was best man.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Eusebia Anderson and a member of the Athena Club.

HAD SIX HUSBANDS SICK OF MATRIMONY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 6.—Grace E. Chapman pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy at a preliminary hearing in Justice Miller's court, admitting she had married six men and had never obtained a divorce from any of them. "Yes, I'm guilty," she testified. "I've had six husbands and I'm sick of matrimony. Most of the men I married were farmers. I would live with them until I got tired of them and then I'd leave. They were so tiresome."

DROPPED FROM TREE, BUMPED BACK AGAIN

CALDWELL, N. J., Oct. 6.—John H. Baldwin slid off a limb while trimming a tree, and while holding to it saw a repair wagon of the trolley, to the elevated platform of which he dropped.

It acted like a springboard and shot him into the tree again. He failed to catch a limb this time and fell to the sidewalk with his right arm and thigh broken.

Carroll of Providence; Secretary of State, Frank Fitzsimmons of Lincoln; Attorney General, James A. Williams of Providence; General Treasurer, Edmund Walker of South Kingston.

HUNT AN ALLIAGTOR AND CATCH WHISKEY

WINSTED, Ct., Oct. 6.—A hunt is on in Columbia street cove, Lee, a Berkshire town, for an alligator about forty inches long which has been seen by several persons from trolley cars. One of the searchers for the alligator raked out an unbroken sealed quart bottle of whiskey, which older residents recall was lost by a prominent villager while fishing through the ice on the cove ten years ago. The liquor was pronounced prime.

BIG CROWD AT BROCKTON SEES HORSE RACES

BROCKTON, Oct. 6.—With $4,000 offered as prize money for to-day's horse races, greater crowds than ever flocked to the Brockton Fair. The thirty-sixth annual fair here, everything indicates, will be the greatest of all of the long series of successes.

By noon it was estimated that 30,000 persons had passed through the gates into the fair. This marks a new record for second day crowds.

Yesterday's crowds of not less than 18,000 was exceeded early in this, "New England Day." To-day the Brockton Horse Show began as an added feature of interest at the Fair. This show is acknowledged to be the finest open-air horse show held in this country. The exhibits this year are better than ever before.

There are all sorts of attractions for everyone. Three vaudeville performances on three stages and three brass bands to keep everyone moving. The horse races are good this year, as they always are. The cattle and live stock exhibit is said to be the best ever seen at the Fair.

An exhibit which attracts universal attention and admiration is that of Homer Davenport, the cartoonist, of his white Arabian horses. To add to the realism of the scene Mr. Davenport has a colored man dressed as an Arab to attend to his beautiful steeds. Among the Davenport Arabs are some war horses and one which bears the marks of a spear-thrust in its handsome neck.

HEARST WILL NOT RUN FOR MAYOR OF NEW YORK; ANSWERS QUESTIONS

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—In answer to questions asked of him by the New York World, William R. Hearst replied as follows:

First Question—What does Mr. Hearst think of the nomination of Bannard?

"I think," Mr. Hearst replied, "that Mr. Bannard is an amiable gentleman, personally, but I think he is better fitted by nature and experience to get campaign contributions from the trusts than ballots from the people.

Second Question—What does Mr. Hearst think of the nomination of Gaynor?

"I believe that Judge Gaynor is a good man and would make a good Mayor, but I am sincerely sorry that Tammany is to be allowed to use his good name as a cloak for another raid upon this pillaged city.

"Judge Gaynor says that it is fortunate that he received the Tammany endorsement, as he could not have afforded the expense of an independent campaign.

With Gaynor; Against Tammany.

"I think that it is most unfortunate for him and for the city. I think that Judge Gaynor could have afforded the expense of an independent campaign better than the city can afford the expense of another Tammany administration. The few dollars that Judge Gaynor will save himself will cost this city many a million.

"I am sure, too, that the honest Independent citizens of New York would gladly have subscribed ten times the amount necessary for Judge Gaynor's campaign rather than have these Tammany grafters contribute a part of their stolen money for the privilege of stealing more.

"With all, I am for Judge Gaynor, but not for Tammany. I think the Independents should do their best to elect Judge Gaynor and defeat Tammany Hall."

Third Question—What does Mr. Hearst think of the two platforms, Democratic and Republican.

Platform Improved.

"I think the platforms of both the old parties are great improvements upon the former platforms of these parties. In fact, they are largely denials of their former platforms and affirmations of the principles of the Independents.

"If the Independents have done nothing else they have at least compelled the old parties to pay some attention to the demands of the people. It is no longer incendiary to mention municipal ownership; it is no longer revolutionary to declare that the people should possess their own public property, and the stray principle which only the Independents acknowledged four years ago has found its way into the platforms of both the old parties in this campaign.

"Both of the old parties declare in positive terms for municipal ownership of the subways. There are some apparent inconsistencies and ambiguities in the platform statements, but these can be and should be explained and corrected by the candidates themselves.

Want Gaynor's Views.

"I respectfully advise Mr. Bannard to cease prating about his little flat in Harlem and tell the public by what methods of efficiency and economy he intends to bring about conditions which will insure the building of an adequate system of subways, by the city, for the citizens.

"I respectfully advise Judge Gaynor to answer Calvin Tomkins's letter, or in some way to convey to the public definitely his purpose and his plan to compel the public construction and control and, if necessary, operation of the city's subways.

"I believe that Judge Gaynor's views on this question will prove entirely satisfactory, but we Independents want to hear from him personally and positively and publicly.

"It is related that when Calvin Tomkins asked Judge Gaynor his views on municipal ownership the judge said that one might as well ask St. Paul if he were a Christian.

Hearst Will Not Run.

"Perhaps; but if St. Paul were asked that question he would probably reply quite positively that he was a Christian and he would also give his reasons for being a Christian and relate his articles of Christian faith.

"Cannot Judge Gaynor take pattern from St. Paul and be explicit?

"Judge Gaynor says: 'We are now going to fight from the inside.' That is what the canary said when the cat had swallowed it, but there is no record of the result of that fight, and we Independents would like to know just how a fight is to be successfully conducted from the inside of the tiger.

Fourth Question—Will Mr. Hearst run for Mayor himself?

"I have said that I am not a candidate and I cannot consent to become a candidate. I am deeply distressed not to be able to comply with every request of the good friends who have stood with me in so many hard fought battles, but I must act on my own convictions and I am convinced that it would not be best for all of us, that it would not be best for our principles for me to be continually a candidate for office.

Thanks to All Friends.

"The public would soon conclude that I was active in politics, not for principle, but to hold office. While this is far from true, and while my friends know well that I consider office holding the most arduous and onerous task that can fall to the lot of a citizen, still the suspicion that I was a chronic office seeker would certainly injure me, and, what is more important, would probably injure our cause.

"Let us consider the success of our principles rather than any personal or individual vindication.

"I send my grateful greeting to all my friends, my sincere thanks for their good opinion, and I assure them that as long as there is a principle to be fought for they will find me standing loyally by their side, striving as a fellow soldier in the ranks to win their continued approval."

I'VE BEEN FAIR, ASSERTS COOK

PITTSBURG, Oct. 6.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, accompanied by Mrs. Cook, left for St. Louis early to-day. Mrs. Cook came from New York, and when the Union Station was reached, hatless and gowned in a neat brown traveling dress, she ran down the steps of the Pullman and fairly jumped into the arms of her husband. He greeted her with a fond embrace and introduced her to the party of friends surrounding him.

Mrs. Cook told an interesting story of how the women passengers had hunted for her from Jersey City to Harrisburg, Mrs. Cook herself joining in the search. At Harrisburg Mrs. Cook revealed her identity.

Dr. Cook was reluctant to talk upon the Peary controversy, merely saying:

"I have tried to be fair, and I regret the unpleasantness greatly. Peary has won honor and credit in his life's effort, and I have respected this all along. I see no reason for his frequently expressed attitude toward me, but I hold no resentment against him. From Copenhagen to Pittsburg the people have treated me kindly and for this I am deeply thankful."

Dr. Cook said he knew nothing of the report that Harry Whitney was to meet him here.

"I am not concerned about him," he concluded, "for I know that he will appear at the proper time."

UNION MEN WINNERS IN BUILDING WAR

Three hundred union workmen have been ordered to return to work on the thirty-five apartment houses being built on Commonwealth avenue, in the Brighton district, as a result of settlements announced to-day at the building trades department of the Boston Central Labor Union. It is declared to be a complete victory for the men.

JEROME DROPS OUT OF RACE?

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Following the nomination of George Gordon Battle for district attorney of New York County by Tammany last night, it was reported to-day that District Attorney Jerome would withdraw as a candidate for re-election.

It was announced in some quarters that District Attorney Jerome would give his support to Judge Charles S. Whitman, the Republican fusion candidate for that office, while in other quarters it was said that Mr. Jerome would take no further part in the campaign, especially abstaining from aiding Judge Whitman on account of a personal attack made upon him by some of Mr. Whitman's backers.

WRIGHT TEACHING SOLDIERS TO FLY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—All is in readiness to-day for the Wright aeroplane school to open. Wilbur Wright to-day confirms the report that in spite of the injury to his engine on Monday he would get the $10,000 offered by the Hudson-Fulton commission.

"I had fulfilled the terms of the contract before the engine was injured," he said.

Mr. Wright's mission in Washington is to teach two officers of the signal corps how to operate the Wright machine which became the property of the government.

SEEK $21,000 FOR INJURIES

Four suits amounting to $21,000 against three railroad corporations were filed with the clerk of courts at Dedham to-day. Thomas F. Tobin of Quincy seeks $4,000 from the Old Colony Street Railway Company because he says he was pushed from one of its cars in Quincy last July.

William Mahoney of Hyde Park sues the same railroad for $2,000 because he alleges one of the cars ran into his horse and wagon at Clarendon Hill square, Hyde Park, in November, 1908.

Anne Rehan of Brookline filed suit against the Boston Elevated for injuries received on August 28, 1903. She declares that one of the company's cars started while she was leaving it, near Aspinwall avenue and Brookline avenue, Brookline, and she was thrown to the ground and injured.

Daniel Ross of Quincy asks the court to award him $10,000 in a verdict against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. He alleges one of its locomotives struck him while he was crossing Water street, Quincy, last July.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

WAGON KILLS LITTLE BOY

Little Johnny Caldont, two years old, was run over and killed in front of No. 474 Commercial street to-day. His head was crushed and he was dead before Dr. William Dunn reached the Hanover street police station, where the body was taken in an ambulance. Johnny was run over by a wagon of the Boston Bundle Wood Co. and William Percell, the driver, of No. 123 West Sixth street, South Boston, is held by the police pending an investigation. The child lived at No. 7 Foster place, North End.

MANY BUFFALOES PERISH IN FIRE

CALGARY, Alberta, Oct. 6.—Word was brought here that the Canadian buffalo park at Wainwright, Alberta, had been destroyed by the prairie fire which has been burning in that section for a week. As the fire burned the fence surrounding the park, the herds of buffalo, estimated at 800 animals, and a large herd of elk escaped, but many of the animals were killed.

CHUM ABSENT, MAN IS HELD

HAVERHILL, Oct. 6.—Christos Tzapaz, who was arrested in Boston, early yesterday, on suspicion of knowing something about the mysterious disappearance of his chum, Costos Hasiotis, was held to-day in $300 on the charge of stealing $80 from his friend. In case any one offers bail the police are prepared to make further charges against him so that the bail will be raised to such a figure that he will not be freed.

In the meantime the Greeks of the city, who number 1,200, are convinced that Hasiotis has been murdered and that his body is hidden in the neighborhood of Silver Hill. Searching parties are looking for it.

LOST NORTH END GIRL FOUND IN NEW YORK

A clew to the whereabouts of Irma Cuneo, the nine-year-old daughter of Giovanni Cuneo, the wealthy North End baker, was received by the father from New York, who immediately left for that city. The girl has been missing for two weeks.

DESERTED FOR SKATING RINK

Patriotic dates play a big part in the shattered love romance of William Frank Poole of Stoneham, a Boston salesman, who is suing his pretty wife, Blanche Beatrice Poole, for divorce before Judge Sanderson in the Middlesex county court in East Cambridge.

Mr. Poole, who is twenty-six, first met his wife, who is twenty-three, on Patriots' Day, April 19, 1904. They were married on Washington's Birthday, February 22, 1906.

In his libel he says he found her in a hotel in Boston with another man, and that she has deserted him. Skating rinks, he said, had more attractions for her than her home. Mrs. Poole, who is pretty and stylishly dressed, sat in the court room and listened intently to her husband's testimony. A bevy of girl friends surrounded her. She is contesting the suit. Her attorney is John P. Feeney. Alexander L. Peckham is acting for her husband.

RECORD CROWD TO SEE TIGERS PLAY PIRATES

PITTSBURG, Oct. 6.—Ambitious for the distinction of seating a greater number of persons than has ever attended a single baseball game, the management of the Pittsburg Club is engaged in perfecting arrangements for the opening of the World's Championship battle between the Detroit American and the Pittsburg National Clubs here on Friday.

At Forbes Field, where the conflict will be waged, a force of workmen is constructing 8,000 additional seats after first having built a false fence some distance from the present boundary.

At the down-town offices of the club clerks are swamped in the task of returning letters, estimated to contain many thousands of dollars, for the reason that the reserved seat supply became exhausted Saturday.

How many persons will attend the games here Friday and Saturday is questionable, but from present indications an estimate of from 75,000 to 100,000 is believed not to be an exaggeration.

It was reported to the Pittsburg Club officials to-night that ticket speculators were, in a measure, responsible for the dearth of seats for the games of Friday and Saturday. It is said that sections of the grandstand have been bought in bulk by several ticket syndicates and that the tickets are on sale at cafes and down-town cigar stores. The report is being investigated by the ball club authorities.

Speculators are coming from Portland, Ore., San Francisco and Denver, and there will be delegations from all cities embraced by the major leagues.

More than two hundred newspaper men from all parts of the country will be here to write accounts of the battle, and the task of assigning the men to places of advantage is one of difficulty. In addition there will be 100 telegraph operators.

Already the police department is making preparations to protect spectators and guard against accidents. The betting is remarkable for the amount of money in evidence. It is said that more than $200,000 has been placed by Pittsburgers and a greater sum is said to be awaiting takers. The average betting is about even although many bets offering 10 to 7 and 10 to 8 have been made.

BROCKTON MARATHON FRIDAY AFTERNOON

The second annual Marathon, under the auspices of the Brockton Fair, will be held Friday, starting from the B. A. A. at 12 o'clock and finishing with a circuit of the race track at the Brockton Fair grounds about 2:30 p. m.

The finish of the Marathon will be reviewed by Gov. Eben S. Draper, Lieut.-Gov. Louis A. Frothingham, Gov. George H. Prouty of Vermont, together with the military aides of both Governors and other distinguished guests. The prizes will be presented to the winners by Gov. Draper.

It will be possible for those interested to see the start of the race from the B. A. A. at 12 o'clock and then take the 12:43 or 1:05 train from the South station and arrive at the fair grounds in ample time to see the finish of the race.

Manager Thorston of the Bates football team has added a game to the schedule. The original list closed with the game with Bowdoin on November 6, but Tufts will be played at Medford on November 13.

The game with Tufts will be the second meeting between the colleges, although most of the students probably think it is the first. The first game of football ever played at Bates, in either 1877 or 1878, was with Tufts on the old baseball grounds at College street and Mountain avenue. Bates played without uniforms and with practically no knowledge of the game, and was of course beaten.

Tufts's showing Saturday against the Cadets was disappointing to the coaches and a hard week of practice is in order for the purpose of strengthening the weak points and crudities that developed Saturday and of rounding a better eleven into shape for the Colby game next Saturday.

MANY AFTER PICTURES OF THE BIG FIGHT

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6.—Although the Johnson-Ketchel match is regarded among sportsmen as a very one-sided proposition, a state of affairs revealed by the betting odds against the middleweight champion, all kinds of inquiries are coming in from showmen in respect to the pictures. The best explanation of this is that the possibility of a Ketchel victory makes the shadowgraphs something worth taking a chance with.

This idea is succinctly put in a letter to James W. Coffroth from Tommy Burns, who is very much of a theatrical man just now and who knows a good thing when he sees it.

Burns, who is in Australia, writes Coffroth that a set of pictures showing Johnson on the floor would be better in Australia than a gold mine. And in case it should come to pass that Johnson is stretched on the floor Tommy intimates that he would like to become possessed of the Australian rights of the Ketchel-Johnson pictures if the price is not too steep.

But there is another Australian speculator with an eye on the pictures, and that is Jack Wren, the well-known promoter of Melbourne. Before Burns was heard from, Coffroth wrote Wren, offering him the Australian agency, and Wren cabled that he would accept.

Of course the desire to have an interest in the pictures will not be so keen if the expected happens—or, in other words, if Johnson wins—but matters are in such shape that theatrical managers have to invest in a pig in a poke, as the saying is.

Coffroth, who is engineering the picture end of the game, as well as the fight, sagely says that this is a case where options don't go. And that even though Ketchel may be defeated, the pictures will have a lot of value according to the nature of the fight put up by the middleweight champion.

If Ketchel's showing is such as thrills the big throng who will witness the real bout, the films will surely make a hit with those who watch the struggle second hand. Coffroth announces that he has made arrangements with Hammerstein to handle the pictures throughout New York, and no less a personage than our old friend Billy Brady has made a bid for certain of the rights.

Johnson is joshed by his friends at times for being so solicitous about his training and he bridles when it is suggested that he seems to respect Ketchel more than most of the big men he has gone against.

"I will answer all these sneers about being afraid of Ketchel when I get him in the ring," said Johnson. "It would be a nice thing after working up to a fight with Jeffries if I was whipped through carelessness, wouldn't it?"

Ketchel also put in a light day.

The Chicago Motor Club, which anticipates holding a 1,000-mile endurance run next week, does not like the present system of point penalization, and has sought permission from the contest board of the A. A. A. to make revisions. The chances are, however, that the contest board will determine against any change from the present rules, as they have not as yet been given sufficient trials to prove either their efficiency or defects. The first test of those rules came in the Munsey tour and locally the next application of the same will be on the run of the Bay State Automobile Association later in the month.

In the single test already held the rules proved decidedly satisfactory, and there is no reason to anticipate anything different in the future. Still there may be some value in the request of the Chicago motorists. In the past they have brought forth some most excellent changes and rules, and it is safe to say that no section of the country pays closer attention or gives greater study to the cause of motor contests than do the men of that city who have ever been to the fore in all that pertains to the sport.

An effective way to cover up grease cups or the small oil cups that are used in such parts as steering knuckles and connections, spring shackles and rear axles so that they may be kept free from the dirt and mud which almost invariably accumulates on them and is likely to be carried through into the bearing with the grease or oil when the cup is filled is to procure a number of hollow rubber balls of just such size that the cups will fit within them and to enlarge the holes so that they may be forced over the cups and get a tight grip on the bottom of the cups. The balls will make absolutely tight coverings for the cups, and if they are painted the color of the car they do not by any means detract from its appearance.

The only six cylinder entered in the Fairmount Park Race is the Alco which will be driven by Harry Grant of this city, and of whom great things are expected in the contest. The work of the men in practice during the past two or three mornings is indicative of considerable speed in the final struggle. Mr. Whitney and a party of Bostonians will leave Boston early Friday morning and reach Philadelphia in season to witness the big event.

* * *

That the rivalry among racing automobile drivers is tempered with sympathy is indicated by the offer of "Jim" Florida to take the place of Herbert Lytle in the Fairmount Park race of next week. Florida volunteers to drive Lytle's car and, if he wins, all the emoluments and glory is to go to Lytle, who now lies in a hospital owing to injuries incurred in the Long Island Derby last week. Lytle is said to be recovering slowly but surely. Florida is a member of the well known Locomobile team.

DOOLAN SUSPENDED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—President Heydler of the National League has suspended Shortstop Doolan of Philadelphia for the rest of the season and fined him $50 following yesterday's game, which was forfeited by Philadelphia to New York. Heydler took the ground that Doolan was mainly responsible for making things unpleasant for Umpire Mullen on that occasion. Otto Knabe, the Philadelphia second baseman, and Lew Moren, the pitcher, were fined $25 each, but not suspended.

BELONGS TO RED SOX.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 6.—The National Baseball Commission has handed down a decision in the case of Pitcher Hunt, holding that the player was properly sold by the Hutchinson, Kan., club to the Boston American League Club, and that Wichita, which claimed to have bought the player prior to his sale to Boston, had no rightful claim on him.

SCHOOL FOOTBALL.

Groton School looks to be weaker than usual this season, with St. Mark's apparently going better than for six years. The annual game between these two schools this year promises to be close.

If early season form counts for much, Rindge has the jump on Somerville, and the Interscholastic League race is going to be a hard one for Somerville to get ahead of Rindge in.

Melrose is having a hard time in its early season games and Coach Jim O'Connell has anything but a bright outlook ahead. There are but few experienced players on the squad and the new material is not good high school calibre.

HARRY SMITH AGAIN TO LEAD BOSTON DOVES

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 6.—The Boston Doves open here this afternoon with the Phillies in a two-game series which will end the season for both teams. There is so little interest in the contests that it was proposed yesterday to play both games this afternoon if the sanction of the league officials could be secured, and possibly this permission will be received before the teams line up for the opening struggle.

The Boston team has been trying out a number of youngsters and President John Dovey is confident he has the material for a club for next year that will give a good account of itself. Moran, who played in Thomas' place in left field in the final game against Brooklyn yesterday, and Getz, another of the newcomers, made two of the nine hits secured off the Dodgers' pitcher.

Mr. Dovey said this morning that there likely would be no change in the management of the Doves, although several of the old time players will be conspicuous by their absence when the team goes South for practice in the Spring. He said,

"Harry Smith has been doing as well with the team as any man could have done under the circumstances. We got a bad start and then constant dissension in the club kept even the players, who were trying faithfully, from doing their best.

"If the change in management had been made a long time before it was, we would not have finished in last position, but it is too late to worry over that now, so I'll go ahead and plan for next year. We have a lot of youngsters who will make good and I am well pleased with the work of some of them.

"Some of the old player will not be with us next season, but I am not prepared to say just which ones will be disposed of. A lot has been printed about various new managers for the Doves, as well as several new owners for the team, but there is nothing doing in either line. I am not going to dispose of the club and I am not figuring on anyone to displace Harry Smith."

WORLD SERIES BASEBALL AT RED SOX PARK

Broader interest than ever is being shown by thousands of Boston fans in the great World's Champion series this week and the bitter coming battles between McGraw's scrappy Giants versus the Boston Red Sox. The full scores, play by play, by special wire, will be given on Friday and Saturday afternoons next, up at American League Park, Boston.

On a monster blackboard every move of all three great inter-city battles between Detroit and Pittsburg, New York and Boston and Chicago Cubs versus White Sox will be shown.

Of stellar local attraction on Saturday at 2 p. m., a fine game of ball will be played between an all-star New England League club and a picked all-Boston team of big leaguers.

This Saturday battle will be devoted in proceeds to the benefit of good old "Sam" Crane, one of the famed veterans of the national game, now very ill.

In the teams will play such fast men as "Sim" Murch, Marty O'Toole and "Red" McGovern of the Brocktons, Billy Cooney now of the Hub Doves; Tom Devine of Fall River, Dick Howard of Waterbury, Jim Dunlap and Dick O'Brien of the Houghton & Dutton team, Jim Mulvey and Carl Lindberg of Portland, and Magee of Lynn and Lyons of the Weymouth Deweys. Andy Owens, the New England League champ, will patch. Pat Donovan, the great Red Sox scout, and Connolly, of the New England League, will umpire. HOLY CROSS MEETS YALE TEAM TODAY

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 6.—Holy Cross football squad, consisting of seventeen players, are here to play Yale this afternoon. Judging from the team's work to date, Holy Cross is a little stronger than last year's eleven, which was beaten 18 to 0 by Yale. Holy Cross has played two games so far this season, defeating Norwich University, 18 to 0, and New Hampshire State College, 13 to 0.

Tobin, last year's tackle, returned to school yesterday, and though he has had only one day's practice he will start the game at guard. The Holy Cross will probably line up as follows Joy, l.e.; Davitt, l.t.; Tobin, l.g.; Monahan, c.; Sweeny, r.g.; Haggerty, r.t.; Lawlor, r.e.; Mahoney, q.b.; Jones, l.h.b.; Dunn, r.h.b.; Sheid, f.b.

DESHLER DEFEATS YOUNG CORBETT IN FIVE ROUNDS

YOUNG CORBETT IS DOWN AND OUT

Former Marvel Easy for Dave Deshler

It isn't often that a fighter who quits is cheered for that act, but that was the reception accorded to Billy Rothwell, with the ring-de-plume of Young Corbett, the former lightweight champion, who simply dropped on the mat from exhaustion in the fifth round of his bout with Dave Deshler at the Armory A. A. last night.

It was not the same ring star of former days who broke the heart and fighting reputation of Terrible Terry McGovern eight years ago and made a record with his mitts since that put him at the top of his class.

So fat that the beef bulged over the enormous elastic belt that he wore around his waist for support, he presented a better advertisement for some pork concern than an up-to-date ringster, and that his fighting days were over was made evident when the action began.

From the breakaway it needed no field glass to perceive that Deshler, the finished athlete, speedy on his feet and fit to go at lightning pace, was Corbett's master, handicapped by the wads of fat that stuck out all over him; yet the old fighting spirit was there, and he made the gamest stand that could be wished for against the torturing mauling Deshler handed to him, till he was finally forced to stop before the bout was half over.

It was the remembrance of former triumphs of the Westerner whose gameness was never questioned that caused the fans to feel sorry for the condition of the once great lightweight star, and when he went to his knees in the fifth round after a shower of rights and lefts on the head, he got the sympathy of the crowd. He was not knocked out, but simply had reached the end of physical endurance that a life of high living shortens. He even attempted to get to his feet and continue the one-sided battle, but his seconds rushed into the ring, while cries of "stop it" were heard from every section of the house.

Corbett in Distress.

Before the first round was over Corbett was puffing and blowing like a young porpoise, mainly through his own vain efforts to reach Deshler, who glided about just out of range, and before the Denverite could recover from his elephantine plunges was stepping in with short rasping punches which bruised the flesh and took the steam out of the pudgy object in front of him.

Corbett did his best to show that he was far from being all in, but appearances were against him, and when his wind began to leave him, with Deshler still as fresh as a young colt, contentedly chewing gum all the while, there was no doubt of the outcome. Wearing that confident air that always made him formidable, Corbett went at Deshler as he used to in the zenith of his ring career, but his speed soon left him and he became an easy mark for Deshler, who showered on stinging lefts to the face that blinded and choked, and he knew he could not travel the whole distance.

Fearful of a pounding on that part of his anatomy which would have been fateful to his chances any way, Corbett protected his stomach with his guard, leaving his face open to attack, and Deshler made the most of it by pumping in rights and lefts which mashed Corbett's features to a pulp.

Such kind of treatment was more than a fighter could stand for any length of time and Corbett's ending was a certainty before many rounds had been covered, for he was in no shape to stand the punishment that he was sure of getting before the bout had gone far.

With his flabby face cut and turned raw by the contact of Deshler's gloves, and his sight almost gone, Corbett was past making a fight, yet it was a regretful ending of a former ring idol.

Exciting Prelim Event.

The real blood tingling item on the boxing card was the settoo between Joe Nelson, a sandy-haired boxer from Lawrence, and Eddie McCann of New York, and their six-round skit was marked by sledge hammer wallops that stirred the excitement up, as a sudden ending was likely to come at any second.

The New Yorker who came over to act as a second for Young Corbett had no idea he was going to mix till Nelson's opponent, Young Perron, wired the club that he could not appear, and McCann was a willing substitute and saved the visiting delegation he was with by winning the decision at the end of six rounds and made quite an impression by the way he handled himself.

For three rounds McCann mussed up Nelson's face with his left till he wouldn't be recognized by his friends, but there was music in the fourth session, as Nelson made a stab to even up for the licking he was getting. He tore in and nearly dropped the Gothamite with a healthy right to the jaw, and they both began to unfasten the haymakers in rapid succession till their strength gave out and they hung to each other for support.

After a long absence, Tommy Fury, the hard-swinging Attleboro lad, appeared with Tommy Foley of South Boston facing him in the semi-final part of the card. Foley proved to be the best two-handed fighter, scoring often, while Fury was trying to get his famous punch going and earned the award at the end of the eight rounds.

Max Baker added more lustre to his name by winning from Ralph Tickle of Pawtucket in six rounds.

Round One.

Deshler was the first to let go and shot a left to the face but Corbett was right back with the same hand. Both countered hard with lefts smacking on the face with a thud. Corbett raised a shout by rushing and driving a right to the body and left to the head, Deshler clinching. Deshler stepped around and worked his left over twice, jabbing on the nose. They got close and smashed away with both hands, Deshler working his fists like a triphammer. Again they moved together and there was some fiery action, both letting go as fast as they could swing, with Corbett slowing up first. Corbett seemed anxious to carry the pace to the limit, and Deshler was only too willing, picking off some nice jabs, which began to bother Corbett's breathing apparatus. Deshler's round.

Round Two.

Deshler shot through a jab to the face. He repeated, and hung a light right on Corbett's jaw. The local lad walked around snapping his left into Corbett's face without any return and suddenly rushed sinking his right into Corbett's fleshy abdomen causing groans from the onlookers. It distressed Corbett and he held his hands low while Dave peppered him with a right and left cross fire on the face and head. Corbett rushed and swung wildly, getting badly winded and Deshler hit him where and when he pleased. Deshler's round.

Round Three.

Just to add to Corbett's worry Deshler kept shooting over straight lefts on the nose, putting that organ out of commission as a wind passage. Corbett got furious and waded in, planting his right on the body. As Corbett rushed again, Dave simply stepped aside and easily evaded the ball of fat. Before Corbett fairly got set Dave slammed a terrific right to the body that doubled his foe in a knot. Corbett went wide on a left swing and they got together and let fly with Deshler scoring time and again with short hooks to the head. Corbett backed to the ropes with Deshler after him and while he held his hands over his stomach Dave banged away with either hand on his exposed face. Deshler's round.

Round Four.

Deshler aimed for the wind with a straight left and scored before Corbett could get a punch started. Dave forced the issue and drove a right to the jaw and slapped on two lefts to the face. Corbett invited an exchange with heads together and Deshler smothered him with rights and lefts to the face. A wild left swing caught Deshler on the head but did no damage, but he preferred to pull away when Corbett rushed again to land right. They fought at arms length pelting away till Corbett tied up as his wind died out. Corbett aimed a good right to the head that started Dave and he drove Corbett back piling in right and left on his face. Deshler's round.

Round Five.

Dave slipped over a stinging left to the face making Corbett rub his nose, but he still had a kick and hooked with left to the body. He started to kid Dave, but the Cambridge lad was not to be caught napping and did not make any reply. Corbett saw his ruse didn't work and hung onto his stomach while Deshler whaled away on his face which was unprotected. Corbett made no pretense to block the onslaught and suddenly dropped to his knees after a series of right and left smashes on the face. The referee stood over him tolling off the count and before the time limit Corbett's seconds jumped into the ring and stepped between the two boys. Deshler's round.

RIVALS MEET ON MAT TONIGHT

Judging by the vast amount of training and preparation on the part of Walter Willoughby and Carl Anderson it looks as if it will be a warm session in the wrestling bout at the Columbia to-night. Willoughby has put himself under considerable expense to get in trim for his opponent, having secured the services of Joe Franz so that he could have a good man to train with.

Willoughby claims the middleweight championship and has defended the title against all comers with success. Anderson won the international tourney in London a year ago and since entering the professional ranks has never met defeat. He is confident of winning the bout this evening and will have Harvard boys present in large numbers to cheer him on. Wrestler Anderson is the professor of the grappling art in the Harvard gymnasium and popular with the boys.

Nothing succeeds like circulation. The AMERICAN has quantity and quality.

THE RED SOX BATTERS.

The Red Sox batters rank as follows in the 1909 averages: Speaker sixth, Lord seventh, Carrigan ninth, all in the honor list; Stahl thirteenth, Gardner thirty-second, Hooper forty-second, Wagner forty-fourth, Niles fifty-fifth, Donohue sixty-fourth, McConnell sixty-fifth, Wolter seventy-second, Cicotte 106th, Madden 118th, Arellanes, 120th, Wood 137th.

FOX HUNTERS HOLD TRIALS

Fox hunters who have been interested in the annual field trials of Brunswick Fox Hound Club in former years, are receiving invitations to the coming trials of the club, which will begin in Barre the morning of October 11. Accompanying the invitations are pamphlets giving the program for the week's work. They are sent by Bradford S. Turpin, Roxbury, secretary of the club.

The coming trials will be the 21st of the club, and the bench show for fox hounds in conjunction with the show will be the fifth. The latter will be on the green in front of Hotel Barre, where the club will make its headquarters, and is partly for the entertainment of the people of Barre, who gather in large numbers to see the dogs shown in the ring. The club usally puts up a lunch for the people of the town while the show is on.

The field trials are open to all fox hounds. There are two classes run, a derby for the puppies whelped since January 1, of last year, and an all-age stake or fox hounds of any age.

The judges will be the same in both, Mr. Turpin, J. P. Bowditch, S. Velsor, W. M. Buckley, Harry Bates and A. B. McGregor.

The derby will be started soon after sunrise and will be completed the following day, thus giving the puppies two days in the field. Entries for this stake will close at the club headquarters October 10, at 6 o'clock at night. Under the regulations governing the stake, but two entries can be made by any owner, whether individual or club.

The winner of the derby stake will hold for a year the Portsmouth hunt derby cup, and will win outright a cup given by L. W. Campbell, Woonsocket, R. I.

The all-age stake will start Wednesday morning, and continue every day until the judges are satisfied they can give a decision. The trials for the old dogs probably will last three or four days, but might possibly run over into the following week. A contingency of this kind is not expected, but might take place and is within power of the judges as they are not limited for time in giving a decision. There will be an additional event in connection with the coming trials, a match race between packs of Walker and July hounds, ten dogs in each pack. The race will be judged by the men chosen by the Brunswick Fox Hound Club for its judges. The winning pack will receive $100 in plate or cash from the club and the loser $50.

This race is the outcome of years of wrangling by owners of Walker and July fox hounds.

WILL BAT NELSON FIGHT FRED WELSH?

Battling Nelson appears to have made up his mind to take the lightweight title into retirement with him, for he says that he will not fight again unless he receives a $10,000 bonus win or lose.

Freddie Welsh, the English champion, will be here soon with a new challenge for Nelson and will post a $5,000 forfeit to go as a side bet. Welsh has earned the right to a match with Nelson, and a bout between them would probably draw big money.

If Nelson refuses to fight the clever Briton under fair terms the latter can justly claim the title.

In days of old Nelson would have been compelled to forfeit the lightweight championship or accept businesslike challenges, such as he has received from Welsh for the last year or more.

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

YOUNG CORBETT'S PITIABLE EXHIBITION at the Armory last night goes to prove what I have frequently said in these columns—that the champions do not come back. It was hard to believe that the pudgy man who acted as a punching bag for Deshler, who, by the way, is far from being a wonder, was one of the marvels of the boxing world a few years ago. There is something about hard training for several years which reacts on a fighter and forever prevents him from regaining his old time form after being out of the game for a few years. Few who saw Young Corbett last night and wondered at his hog fat condition are willing to believe that he had tried to train. The contrary is true, however, as he has been making as valiant an effort to come back as was ever made by a fighter, and you saw the result. Believe me, they don't come back.

A LITTLE MORE ON THAT COMING back business. There are a whole lot of fight fans all over the country who put Jim Jeffries up on a pedestal several years ago and refuse to allow him to get down. They have it all doped out that he will go into the ring with Johnson and again be that same old smashing, invincible Jeff that he was when he fought Sharkey, Corbett and Fitz, and they are going to get the jolt of their lives. In the first place I don't believe he will ever get into the ring with the black champion, and if he does he may be good enough to beat Johnson, and I hope he will, but he will be far from your old idol. Put it down again in you little book that they never come back.

E. KNOWLAND, LYNN, MASS.:—In my opinion A has the best of the argument, as I figure Christy Mathewson the best pitcher in the game to-day. Mordecai Brown is a great twirler, but in my book he does not class with Christy.

THERE'S A CHANCE TO-NIGHT FOR a lot of you sports to help along a worthy cause and at the same time get your money's worth by attending the testimonial benefit for the family of the late Francis (Kid) Cummiskey at Cypress Hall, Cambridge.

MAX BAKER, THE CLEVER LITTLE local lad, added another victory last night to his list, which is getting to be of sufficient proportions to soon assure him a chance in a main bout. Dick Fleming's judgment in giving him the decision over Ralph Tickle met with the approval of the Armory Club members, where all of Baker's boxing has been done. The youngster's clean style of milling has made him a strong favorite, and many of the club members believe he will develop into one of the best boys turned out in Boston in many years.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Noticing in the Saturday evening edition your answer to J. L. S. regarding "The Lion and the Mouse" having its first production at the Park Theatre, would say you are a bit off on theatrical matters, as it happened to be played (and not for the first time either) at the Hollis Street Theatre in 1907. Now, "Kid," while you may be "the goods" in sporting matters, you had better confine your efforts solely to that and leave fashions and theatrical matters to some one with a better memory.
Yours truly,
"NANCY."

Much obliged, old scout, for your advice, but don't you think it would be a good thing for you to wise yourself up a bit and get some one to tell you just where you get off at before you deal it out sort of promiscuous like? Here's right back at you! As I said the other day the show was put on in a city for the first time at the Park Theatre. This was on October 23, 1905. It appeared at the Hollis some time in the Spring of 1908. Now will you be good?

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Dear Sir—In regards to fighters, I have a boy in East Boston who is traveling at an awful speed and is looking for a bout with any 115 pounder. His name is Edward Keough, but he is better known as "Big Stick." One particular thing that has everybody's goat is his height. He stands 5 ft. 11 in. Hoping to hear a challenge.
Yours very truly,
(Manager) FRANK K. PAYNE.

H. F. K.—QUIT YOUR KIDDING about that voice business. It's nice to know that you like the dope, but you mustn't try to put one over on the young and innocent.

THERE IS A LETTER HERE FOR Eddie Keevin, manager of Jimmy Walsh, bantam champion of the world.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Will you please state in your column that Charley MacDonald of Cambridge is in training, and will meet all comers at 105 pounds. He would like to meet Teddy Murphy at the Armory A. A.
Yours truly,
JOS. MACK.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Being a constant reader of your column, I write to ask you to publish a challenge. The paperweight fighter of Roxbury, Frank Hayes, would like to meet any 95 pound man in the State. Address

ATTELL DEFEATS MILLER.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—Abe Attell defeated Buck (Twin) Miller of Boston in six rounds at the Douglas A. C. last night before a record crowd. Miller appeared afraid of the champion and seemed content to let Attell do the leading. The fight was tame, as neither exerted himself until the last round, when Attell cut loose and had Miller bewildered by hurricane jabs to the jaw.

BANTAM TITLE IS HOPE OF ABE'S BROTHER MONTE

The Attell family of Queensberry acrobats is ambitious to achieve a boxing honor never yet held by the members of any family with pugilistic tendencies. The Attells are desirous of acquiring two championships and thus admonishing the world that they possess more pugilistic talent than ever has been shown by any family.

Abe Attell, as is well known, is the holder of the featherweight title, and his younger brother, Monte, is now in hot pursuit of the bantam honors. There is a third brother, named Caesar, with some pretension as a boxer, but no championship laurels are at present parceled out for him.

If the experts on the Pacific coast are to be believed Monte already is the chief of the bantams, and has the title nailed to the championship pole. Monte, with the shrinking modesty that always has characterized his brother Abe, announces that he is the "bantam champion of the world." But Monte is a bit previous with his claim for there are half a dozen men in the East ready and able to dispute his pretension. Included in that number is Jimmy Walsh, who has a stronger claim to the bantam title than any of the other little fellows in the game.

In addition, there are Phil McGovern, Charley Goldman, Joe Wagner and several others who would like nothing better than a chance to exchange punches with either Attell or Walsh.

So positive is Monte that he has the title clinched that he has arranged a match with Danny Webster to take place in Los Angeles on October 12, the same date on which the Ketchel-Johnson fight is scheduled. Monte announces that the bout will be for the bantam title, which he now holds. Monte probably will learn more about the real situation when he comes East.

He never has beaten any one who had any claim to the championship, and his pretension is impertinent assurance. Monte and Jimmy Walsh met in Philadelphia in 1905 in a six-round bout, which went the limit, with no decision. Walsh afterward went out of his class and tackled Abe Attell, much to his sorrow. Possibly Monte thinks that he acquires the family rights to Abe's victories and that Walsh is thus disposed of.

In the opinions of those who have seen Monte Attell in action in recent years are to be accepted, he is a greatly improved fighter, from all points of view. Some go so far as to assert that Monte now is as good, if not better, than Abe, but that statement will require mixing with considerable salt. Monte disposed of Frankie Neil with the greatest of ease, but Neil was a back number at the time, and that takes away much from the performance.

However, there is one certain way to set at rest all these rival claims, and that is to pit Attell against Walsh and the other good men of the East. Monte may be the best man on the Coast, but that does not give him the bantam title by several miles.

Several families have boasted of two good fighters and one champion, but never of two champions. The McGovern family produced Champion Terry, and Philly, who seeks the bantam title, the same as Monte Attell.

Mike Twin Sullivan grabbed off the welter title, but Jack never has gained any title.

Dave Sullivan held the featherweight honors for a few weeks, but Spike Sullivan failed to gather in a championship. Jack Jeffries was smothered in five rounds by Jack Johnson, and it remains to be seen whether Jim will avenge the indignity.

Billy Lavigne, brother of the "Sawdust Kid," did a great deal of fighting, but did not get any titles.

Belfield Walcott tried hard to duplicate the performances of brother Joe, but failed.

Tact Better Than Beauty In This Life

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THEY came walking along the subway platform engaged in the liveliest of conversations. She was very short and plump, and her tiny feet, shod in white shoes and socks, had hard work to keep step with his long stride. Her mop of tangled brown curls was held in place by a rampantly gay blue bow, and round about the middle of her fat little person was tied a gorgeous blue ribbon.

Her companion was tall—her little curly head came just to the top of his walkingstick. His figure was straight and soldierly, the gray head carried proudly erect. He walked with a limp, and his tiny "lady friend" now walked sedately by his side, now danced gayly ahead of him. They were evidently bound on a sightseeing expedition.

"I'll Let You Rest"

"When your poor leg gets tired, grandpa," she said graciously, "I'll let you sit down in a nice chair and rest."

They passed on with the crowd, the kind old face beaming down on the flushed and eager one by his side, and I venture to say that no two persons in Boston enjoyed an outing any more than those two friends and companions.

The baby girl could not have been more than three years old, but she instinctively knew how to please; she had been born with the blessed gift of tact.

She may be pretty or plain as she grows up, but she will never lack for friends and attention in plenty.

In the first place, she will probably be a good listener; she will let a man talk about himself and his views as long as his breath holds out. She won't try to tell what she knows, what will please, for most men don't think women know anything.

She will not merely sit dumb and listen—that is not inspiring in a listener. She will listen sympathetically.

There is no loftier, sweeter quality in a woman than sympathy.

There are plenty of unsympathetic women who marry, but I don't believe that their husbands find marriage the blissful state it is supposed to be.

Don't Be Smart

I tell you, girls, a man has to be very much in love with you before he is willing to listen while you talk about yourself, and even then he wants you to talk about him at the same time. Never try to be smart when talking to a man, and never, never make him feel foolish. Ridicule kills love more quickly than anything else on earth.

It is strange that while some girls absolutely understand men and their ways, other girls seem to say the wrong thing every time they open their mouths.

If you find that you don't know how to talk to men, keep quiet. Put your entire energies into cultivating the art of listening. You can't be a good listener if you let your mind wander during conversation. The moment your mind wanders your eyes grow blank and the person who is talking knows that you are not listening to him.

Nothing is more flattering than interested attention.

Perhaps you like to talk about yourself, but so does the other person, and the one who is talking a bit is the one who listens.

Don't pretend to be worldly. Men like women to be guileless almost to the point of foolishness, where worldliness is concerned.

Envy Tact, Not Beauty

"She is altogether too sharp for me," I heard a man say of a girl the other day. "To hear her talk you'd think she knew the world from end to end. I feel as though I were talking to another man."

Instead of envying the girl with beauty, envy the one with tact, for tact is a far more powerful quality than beauty.

The person with tact is ready to handle any situation.

It is an inborn quality, but it can be cultivated to a certain extent, and the way to do it is by always thinking of the other person more than of yourself. If you are really kind of heart you will always want to see the other person comfortable and happy.

The tiny little maid who was all excitement going to see the parade, had time to think of her grandfather's lame foot, and assure him that she would see that he had a rest.

Her thoughtfulness delighted him, as it would any man, and he probably keeps that pretty little speech as the brightest memory of the day.

Why Are Women Unbusinesslike?

As a General Thing They Feel Called Upon to Apologize for Working

By Dorothy Dix

(ARTICLE III.)

WE have discovered that the reason the average business woman was unbusinesslike is:

First, because it is so hard for her to get over the dilly-dallying ways of doing things that have been bred in her through generations of housekeeping foremothers.

Secondly, because she persists in confounding business and pink teas and believing that they are one and the same kind, of a function.

The third reason why woman is unbusinesslike is because, as a general thing, the working woman feels called upon to apologize for working.

The one thing that women have not yet acquired is a sense of the dignity of labor, and the only thing about work of which any one needs be ashamed is doing it badly. This lack of pride in honest labor is the reason that so few women ever acquire any craftmanship.

This sense of degradation in work runs the whole female gamut almost. The woman who does her housework with her own hands apologizes for it. The woman who takes in sewing takes up the time that she ought to be running the sewing machine telling you that she wasn't brought up to that kind of thing, and that she never expected to come to it. The woman who takes boarders doesn't do it for pay, or as a business. Oh, dear, no. She had a big house in which she was so lonely that she decided that she would take a few paying guests for company, etc., etc. The woman who clerks in a store if she gets half a chance will hold you up while she relates a tearful romance about what an aristocratic family she belongs to and how rich her grandfather used to be.

They Should Be Proud

It is heart-rending to see the poor, pitiful efforts that these women are making to gloss over and excuse their being at work. They don't glory in the fact that they have enough intelligence and strength to do something worth while in the world, and to be independent instead of being miserable parasites hanging on somebody else.

They are ashamed of the one thing they've got a right to be proud of, and because nobody ever does well anything of which they are not proud they fail. They are unbusinesslike because they cherish the attitude of an amateur toward their work, instead of bending all of their ability toward becoming professionals.

Another reason that women are unbusinesslike is because the average woman never gets a line on herself and never finds out what nature intended her to do, and then does it.

So far as I am able to judge, and I am the confidant of the aspirations of about four million women who write me letters telling me what they would like to do, the women of this country who need to make money desire to do only two things. One of them is to go on the stage. The other is to write.

I literally get thousands of letters a year from women who live all the way from Maine to California, and from the Gulf of Mexico to the Great Lakes, and each and every one of these ladies asks either for a theatrical manager's address or how to get into the magazines.

Ambitious Cooks Silenced

If there's any woman who desires to know how to become a good cook, or a good dressmaker, or a good boarding-house keeper, she keeps her yearnings to herself. The truth is that women take no interest in doing the things that are not spectacular but merely useful.

That is the reason that they are unbusinesslike in their methods when they are forced into commonplace occupations. Yet if the woman who half starves trying to paint pictures that her friends only buy for the sake of charity, would only employ her also-ran artistic temperament in the making of pretty gowns, she could make a fortune; if nine-tenths of the actorines with which the stage is afflicted would put in as much time and study on the characteristics of the hen on poultry farms as they do studying Lady Macbeth they would be walking on velvet instead of beating the hard pavements of Broadway looking for a job.

But no. They would rather starve trying to do the thing that they can't do, but that they think is grand and romantic, than to do the thing that they can do, and be happy and prosperous. Which is not only distinctly unbusinesslike, but truly idiotic.

The final reason why women are unbusinesslike is because the majority of them regard their occupation as so temporary that they do not think it is worth while to ever learn to do it well.

When a man starts out as a clerk or a bookkeeper, or a stenographer, he knows that the only earthly chance he has of rising is to learn to do his work well. It is up to him to acquire the knack of selling goods, or adding up columns of figures accurately, or of learning how to spell correctly, if he ever gets any more pay or a better position.

Business a Makeshift

The woman who goes to work expects to get her big advance through matrimony. She isn't starting in for a life of work, but only for a makeshift. Therefore she doesn't concern herself with anything beyond the present. As for all the fine details, the working beyond hours, the making of her employer's interests her own, the doing of the thousand and one little trifles that still all go to make up the businesslike attitude of an employe, why, she doesn't bother her pretty fluffy head about them.

And who can blame her? After all, the matrimonial job is about the best job that a woman can get.

Of course there are plenty of women who are businesslike, who leave their frills and furbelows and feelings at home, who are as ambitious and faithful and loyal as any man. These women are not among the feminine failures that strew the commercial shore. On the contrary, they are conspicuous successes and they show what women can do in business when they give their minds to it.

After all, the matrimonial job is about the best a woman can get.

Through the Wall

THEY entered by a massive iron gateway on the Rue Poussin and moved slowly up the ascending avenue des Tilleuls past lawns and trees and vine-covered walls, leaving behind the rush and glare of the city, and entering a peaceful region of flowers and verdure where Coquenil lived.

The detective occupied a wing of the original Montmorency chateau, a habitation of ten spacious rooms, more than enough for himself and his mother and the faithful old servant, Melanie, who took care of them, especially during the Summer months, when Mme. Coquenil was away at a country place in the Vosges Mountains that her son had bought for her.

Paul Coquenil had never married, and his friends declared that, besides his work, he loved only two things in the world—his mother and his dog.

It was a quarter to 8 when M. Paul sat down in his spacious dining room to a meal that was waiting when he arrived and that Melanie served with solicitous care, remarking sadly that her master scarcely touched anything, his eyes roving here and there among charming mountain scenes that covered the four walls above the brown and gold wainscoting, or out into the garden through the long open windows.

He was searching, searching for something. She knew the signs, and with a sigh she took away her most tempting dishes untasted.

At 8 o'clock the detective rose from the table and withdrew into his study, a large furnished room opening off the dining room, and furnished like no other study in the world.

Around the walls were low bookcases with wide tops, on which were spread under glass that Coquenil called his criminal museum.

This included souvenirs of cases on which he had been engaged, weapons used by murderers, wonderful sets of burglars' tools, saws, picks, jointed jimmies, etc., all of tempered steel, that could be taken apart and folded up in the space of a thick cigar and hidden about the person.

A Strange Collection.

Also a remarkable collection of handcuffs from many countries and periods in history.

Also a collection of letters or criminals, some in cipher, with confessions of prisoners and last words of suicides.

Also plaster casts of hands of famous criminals and photographs of criminals, men and women, with faces often distorted to avoid recognition; and various gruesome objects—a card case of human skin, the twisted scarf used by a strangler, etc.

As for the shelves underneath, they contained an unequalled special library of subjects interesting to a detective, both science and fiction being freely drawn upon in French, English and German; for, while Coquenil was a man of action in a big way, he was also a student and a reader of books, and he delighted in long, lonely evenings, when, as now, he sat in his comfortable study thinking, thinking.

Melanie entered presently with coffee and cigarettes, which she placed on a table near the green-shaded lamp, within easy reach of the great red leather chair where M. Paul was seated. Then she stole out noiselessly.

It was five minutes past eight, and for an hour Coquenil thought and smoked and drank coffee. Occasionally he frowned and moved impatiently, and several times he took off his glasses and stroked his brows over his eyes.

Finally he gave a long sight of relief and, shutting his hands and throwing out his arms with a satisfied gesture, he rose and walked to the fireplace, over which hung a large portrait of his mother and several photographs, one of these taken in the exact attitude and costume of the painting of Whistler's mother in the Luxembourg gallery.

M. Paul was proud of the striking resemblance between the two women. For some moments he stood before the fine, kindly face, and then he said aloud, as if speaking to her: "It looks like a hard fight, little mother, but I'm not afraid of it."

And almost as he spoke, which seemed like a good omen, there came a clang at the iron gate in the garden and the sound of quick crunching steps on the gravel walk. M. Pougeot had arrived.

M. Lucien Pougeot was one of the eighty police commissaries who, each in his own quarter, oversee the moral washing of Paris's dirty linen.

A commissary of police is first of all a magistrate, but, unless he be a fool, he soon becomes a profound student of human nature, for he see all sides of life in the great capital, especially the dark side.

He knows the sins of his fellow men and women, their follies and hypocrisies; he recieves incredible confessions; he is constantly summoned to the scenes of revolting crime.

Nothing, absolutely nothing, surprises him, and he has no illusions, yet he usually manages to keep a store of grim pity for erring humanity.

M. Pougeot was one of the most distinguished and intelligent members of this interesting body. He was a devoted friend of Paul Coquenil.

The newcomer was a middle-aged man of strong build and a florid face with a brush of thick black hair. His quick glancing eyes were at once cold and kind, but the kindness had something terrifying in it, like the politeness of an executioneer.

As the two men stood together they presented absolutely opposite types, Coquenil taller, younger, deep-eyed, spare of build, with a certain serious reserve very different from the commissary's outspoken directness.

M. Pougeot prided himself on reading men's thoughts, but he used to say that he could not even imagine what Coquenil was thinking or fathom the depths of a nature that blended the eagerness of a child with the austerity of a prophet.

M. Pougeot Is Surprised

"Well, remarked the commissary when they were settled in their chairs, "I suppose its the Rio Janeiro thing? Some parting instructions, eh?" And he turned to light a cigar.

Coquenil shook his head.

"When do you sail?"

"I'm not sailing."

"What at?"

For once in his life M. Pougeot was surprised. He knew all about this foreign offer, with its extraordinary money advantages; he had rejoiced in his friend's good fortune after two unhappy years, and now—now Coquenil informed him calmly that he was not sailing.

"I have just made a decision, the most important decision of my life," continued the detective, "and I want you to know about it. You are the only person in the world who will know—everything. So listen:

"This afternoon I went into Notre Dame Church and I saw a young girl there who sells candles. I didn't know her, but she looked up in a queer way as if she wanted to speak to me, so I went to her and—well, she told me of a dream she had last night."

"A dream?" snorted the Commissary.

"So she said. She may have been lying or she may have been put up to it. I know nothing about her, not even her name, but that's no consequence. The point is that in this dream, as she called it, she brought together the two most important events in my life."

The Dream Alice Told Of

"H'm! What was the dream?"

"She says she saw me twice, once in a forest near a wooden bridge, where a man with a beard was talking to a woman and a little girl. Then she saw me on a boat going to a place where there were black people."

"That was Brazil?"

"I suppose so. And there was a burning sun with a wicked face inside that kept looking down at me. She says she often dreams of this wicked face. She sees it first in a distant star, that comes nearer and nearer until it gets to be large and red and angry.

"As the face comes closer her fear grows, until she wakes with a start of terror. She says she would die of fright if the face ever reached her before she awoke. That's about all."

For some moments the Commissary did not speak. "Did she try to interpret this dream?"

"No."

"Why did she tell you about it?"

Coquenil Tells a Secret

"She acted on a sudden impulse, so she says; I'm inclined to believe her, but never mind that, Pougeot"—he rose in agitation and stood leaning over his friend—"in that forest scene she brought up something that isn't known, something I've never even told you, my best friend."

"Tiens! What is that?"

"You think I resigned from the police force two years ago, don't you?"

"Of course."

"Everyone thinks so. Well, it isn't true; I didn't resign, I was discharged."

M. Pougeot started in bewilderment, as if words nailed him, and finally he repeated weakly: "Discharged! Paul Coquenil discharged!"

"Yes, sir; discharged from the Paris detective force for refusing to arrest a murderer—that's how the accusation read."

"But it wasn't true?"

"Judge for yourself. It was the case of a poacher who killed a guard. I don't suppose you remember it?"

M. Pougeot thought a moment. He prided himself on remembering everything. "Down near Saumur, wasn't it?"

"Exactly. And it was near Saumur I found him after searching all over France. We were clean off the track, and I made up my mind the only way to get him was through his wife and child.

"They lived in a little house in the woods not far from the place of the shooting. I went there as a pedler in hard luck, and I played my part so well that the woman consented to take me in as a boarder."

"Wonderful man!" exclaimed the commissary.

"For weeks it was a waiting game. I would go away on a pedling tour, and then come back as boarder. Nothing developed, but I could not get rid of the feeling that my man was somewhere near the woods."

"One of your intuitions. Well?"

"Well, at last the woman became convinced that they had nothing to fear from me, and she did things more openly. One day I saw her put some food in a basket and give it to the little girl, and the little girl went off with the basket into the forest.

"Then I knew I was right, and the next day I followed the little girl, and, sure enough, she led me to a rough cave where her father was hiding. I hung about there for an hour or two, and finally the man came out from the cave, and I saw him talk to his wife and child near a bridge over a mountain torrent."

"The picture in the dream!"

"Yes, I'll never forget it. I had my pistol ready, and he was defenceless, and once I was springing forward to take the fellow, when he bent over and kissed his little girl.

"I don't know how you look at these things, Pougeot, but I couldn't break in there and take the man away from his wife and child. The woman had been kind to me and trusted me, and—well, it was a breach of duty, and they punished me for it; but I couldn't do it—I couldn't do it—and I didn't do it."

"And you let the fellow go?"

"I let him go then, but I got him a week later in a fair fight, man to man. They gave him ten years."

"And discharged you from the force?"

"Yes; that is, in view of my past services they allowed me to resign." Coquenil spoke bitterly.

"Outrageous! Unbelievable!" muttered Pougeot. "No doubt you were technically in the wrong, but it was a slight offense, and, after all, you got your man. A reprimand at the most, at the most, was called for; and not with you—not with Paul Coquenil."

"A Necessary Move"

The commissary spoke with deeper feeling than he had shown in years, and then, as if not satisfied with this, he clasped the detective's hand and added heartily: "I'm proud of you, old friend; I honor you."

Coquenil looked at Pouget with an odd, little smile. "You take it just as I thought you would—just as I took it myself—until to-day. It seems like a stupid blunder, doesn't it? Well, it wasn't a blunder; it was a necessary move in the game." His face lighted with intense eagerness as he waited for the effect of these words.

"The game? What game?" stared the commissary.

"A game involving a great crime."

"You are sure of that?"

"Perfectly sure."

"You have the facts of this crime?"

"No; it hasn't been committed yet."

"Not committed yet?" repeated the other with a startled glance. "But you know the plan. You have evidence?"

The Bill Clerk Tries to Prove He Is In Love

By KENNETT HARRIS

"I SUPPOSE there are some girls like that—maybe the most of them are—but she's an exception," said the bill clerk.

"Naturally," agreed the cashier, politely.

"But she is," persisted the bill clerk. "I've had my eyes open, and you can't fool me on women, anyway."

"I suppose not," said the cashier.

"It's going on three months since I got to calling at her house and I think a fellow ought to be able to size up a girl in that time," the bill clerk went on.

"He certainly ought," said the cashier. "In that time, a person of your penetration and experience ought to be able to divine her inmost thoughts and analyze her character down to the last perceptible trace. He ought to be able to tell just what she would say or do under any given circumstances.

"You take a smart young fellow of twenty-two or three, and what he doesn't know about a girl after an acquaintance of two or three months isn't worth knowing. Girls always wear their hearts on their sleeves for bow-legged bill clerks to peck at."

"I'm not asking you to believe anything. I'm just stating facts," declared the bill clerk. These cock-sure cashiers don't know it all, either."

"That's a just observation, Johnny, my boy," admitted the cashier. "Put rather rudely, perhaps, but my kindly familiar allusion to a personal peculiarity of yours doubtless provoked that, so we will say no more about it.

"We do not know it all, however. None of us does. You, for instance, know that the lady in question has a winning smile, but you do not know that two of her front teeth have porcelain crowns."

"You bet I don't," said the bill clerk, confidently, "nor anybody else."

"You know that she has a lily-white hand, but you don't know that she smears them over with dope an inch thick and sleeps with gloves on to get 'em that way," pursued the cashier. "Nor do you know why she bought corn plasters at the corner druggist's last night."

"I know she didn't buy anything of the kind," said the bill clerk, "I happened to be with her last night."

"We will waive the question of the date," conceded the cashier. "To continue, you know that she has a delicate appetite, but you are ignorant of the fact that she consumed a second helping of corned beef and cabbage before she set out."

"I wouldn't care if I did know it," said the bill clerk. "It isn't any crime to eat corned beef and cabbage. I eat it myself, and I'd take three helpings if I wanted 'em. I don't know why a girl shouldn't have the same privilege."

"We'll pass the boiled dinner, then," said the cashier. "We will say that you know she has a pretty trick of yawning when you prolong your evening visit beyond the closing time of the corner drug store. Her silken eyelashes droop to her blooming cheeks and her coral mouth stretches to its fullest extent behind the little taper fingers that she has raised in a pretense of concealment.

"Your feelings may be a little hurt, but you can't help admiring. It's just as cute as it can be. You know that, don't you, Johnny? What you don't know is that in less than an hour the putty will be falling from her bedroom window panes as they vibrate to her snores."

"I wouldn't care a continental cuss whether she snored or not," declared the bill clerk. "I suppose she does sometimes. Everybody does, occasionally. I didn't say that she wasn't flesh and blood, did I?"

"That was the impression I received," replied the cashier. "But if you can contemplate all of these possibilities and others that I might mention and still keen from shuddering, the bats, lingering doubt in my mind is removed. Take her, my dear boy, and be as happy as possible."

HOW FRENCH WOMEN DEVELOP THE BUST

Mme. Dorothy De La Revere, French Expert on Feminine Beauty, Tells American Women How to Perfectly Develop the Bust.

"The number of underdeveloped women in America is astonishing," says Mme. Dorothy De La Revere. "I am here in America to teach your beautiful faced women that the face does not attract so much as the form, and I am ready to tell any woman who will write me how the French society women and leading actresses develop their breasts and fill out the hollows of the neck, by what is admitted by authorities to be the only scientific, certain method known.

"It is the refreshing firmness and delightful fulness of the feminine form that captivates, and it is the woman who is most fully developed who monopolises the endearments of the opposite sex.

"If your bust lacks development or firmness, I will tell you how to beautify it. I will not charge anything for this advice—it is free. I am only too glad to tell the secret, so that you cannot fail to succeed within a few weeks' time, for I am sure it will make you healthier, happier and more sought after. All that I ask is that you send me 4 cents to pay postage and I will reply at once personally."

We suggest to our lady readers that they write to this French expert on this matter which we here in America know very little about. Any lady can write to her and should enclose four cents in postage. Address her, Madame Dorothy De La Revere, Suite 1636, 1024 Byron st., Chicago, Ill.

They're Guessing Again; Can You Tell the Time at the Old North Pole?

We know that it is mighty cold at the North Pole, that there is no land there and that both Cook and Peary planted the American flag at that spot in the Farthest North. But how about the time there?

Here is a nice little problem for the solving of which you may earn $5 in cash if you get the correct answer in first, and even if you are sixth you will get $1, for there are five one-dollar prizes. Tackle this problem:

When it is 12 o'clock noon in Boston, what time is it at the North Pole.

Of course you might write to Cook or Peary about this, but it would be better to sit down with a sheet of paper and pencil and figure it out for yourself.

The answers are beginning to roll into the office. Get busy! Here are some of the replies that have been received:

JUST 11 O'CLOCK.

North Pole Editor:

The time at the North Pole would be 11 a. m. GERTRUDE CLUNAN,
No. 9 Seventh street, East Cambridge.

A VERY SIMPLE MATTER.

North Pole Editor:

It is 12 o'clock noon at the North Pole. MRS. W. HORNE
No. 11 Harbor View, Dorchester.

WHAT MAKES NOONTIME?

North Pole Editor:

When the sun is on the meridian of a place it is noontime at that place. All meridians intersect each other at the Pole. The Pole, therefore, has no time. M. J. HORAN.
No. 439 Canal street, Lawrence.

WINTER AT 12 O'CLOCK.

North Pole Editor:

When it is 12 o'clock noon in Boston at the North Pole it is Winter time. GEORGE V. COLLINS.
No. 21 Cook street, Charlestown.

EAT WHAT? ICEBERGS?

North Pole Editor:

What time is it at the North Pole when it is 12 o'clock noon in Boston? I guess it's time to eat. JAMES McCORMICK.
No. 64 Fulton street, Lowell.

HANDS POINT TO 10:40.

North Pole Editor:

When it is 12 o'clock in Boston it is 10:40 at the Pole. LOUISE F. RAUSCH,
No. 109 7th street, East Cambridge.

NOON AT THE POLE.

North Pole Editor:

When it is 12 o'clock noon in Boston, it's 12 o'clock noon at the North Pole. MARGARET SCHREIBER.
No. 146 Lamartine street, Jamaica Plain.

12 O'CLOCK NOON.

North Pole Editor:

When it is 12 o'clock noon in Boston it is 12 o'clock noon at the North Pole. DAVID M. ISRAEL,
No. 52 Water street, Worcester.

ANY TIME AT ALL.

North Pole Editor:

When it is 12 o'clock noon in Boston, it may be called any time at all at the very Pole. It may be called 12 noon Boston time or about 2 p. m. Chicago time, or 5 p. m. San Francisco time and so on. There is no sun rise or sun set at every twelve hours or about, so a day can be started and ended at any side of the horizon. To measure a day at the very Pole, a twenty-four hour clock would be the proper instrument, otherwise it would be hard for one to know whether it is 12 o'clock noon, or 12 midnight, either during the polar six months day or six months night. LINCOLN S. LEVINSON.
No. 23 Houghton street.

BOSTON AND POLAR TIME?

North Pole Editor:

According to Boston time it is 12 o'clock noon at the North Pole when it is 12 o'clock noon in Boston, but according to what might be termed North Pole time noonday is the middle of the artificial polar day, the fraction of time three months after the polar sunrise and three months before the polar sunset. JOHN J. McDONOUGH.
No. 43 Judson street, Boston.

MIDNIGHT, SHE THINKS.

North Pole Editor:

I think the time at the North Pole would be 12 o'clock at night. MRS. F. LINDSTROM
No. 52 Kendall street, Worcester.

JUST THE SAME AS BOSTON.

North Pole Editor:

By a careful study I find when it is 12 o'clock noon in Boston it is just the same time (12 o'clock noon) at the North Pole. H. ELSIE REDDEN.
No. 194 Adams street, Dorchester.

NOON, SAYS FALL RIVER.

North Pole Editor:

I believe the time at the Pole is the same as it is in Boston, 12 o'clock noon. P. L. LA BONITE, JR.
No. 60 Taylor street, Fall River.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME KIND.

North Pole Editor:

In my estimation it will be 12 o'clock at the North Pole when it is 12 o'clock in Boston. HUGH McCABE.
No. 22 Bodwell street, Lawrence.

ALWAYS SAME ON MERIDIAN.

North Pole Editor:

As it is the same time on the meridian everywhere, why not at the North Pole? So it must be 12 o'clock at the North Pole when it is noon in Boston. MARY JOYCE.
No. 30 Linden street, Dorchester.

CAN'T TELL WHAT TIME.

North Pole Editor:

There being no opportunity of taking observations at the North Pole, consequently there is no time that can be determined. JAS. A. ARMSTRONG.
No. 23 Faulkner street, Malden, Mass.

Gladys French Is Bride at Brilliant Ceremony in Church at Canton

BY ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

October weddings are beginning in earnest, and no less than half a dozen society girls become brides to-day. The wedding of greatest interest to Boston is that of Miss Gladys French and Albert Ellis Harding of Cohasset. The ceremony, attended by many Boston fashionables, takes place in the First Unitarian Church in Canton at 4:30 this afternoon, Rev. Bradley Gilman officiating.

The bride, who wears the conventional white satin gown and lace veil, is attended by an unusually attractive group of bridesmaids, all Boston society girls, and including Miss Muriel Crocker of Commonwealth avenue, Helen Read of Manchester by the Sea, Ethel Ranney of Bay State road and Vrylena Hill of Marlboro street.

Miss Madeline French, a sister of the bride, is maid of honor. Abbott French gives his daughter in marriage.

Lester Harding, Harvard '08, is his brother's best man, and the ushers include Richard B. Harding, Cleveland Bigelow and Geoffrey Lewis of Cohasset, Clarence Hovey, Jr., of Brookline, Whitcomb Field of Milton and Francis Colby, also Dr. Loring Swain of Cambridge and Dr. Harrison Webster of Cohasset. The ushers are for the most part classmates of Mr. Harding, Harvard '05.

Mr. and Mrs. French and Mr. and Mrs. Harding assist the young couple in receiving at the reception. A special train left the South Station for Canton.

* * *

Any number of Bostonians went to Whitinsville to-day for the wedding there at noon of Miss Elsa Whitin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Marston Whitin, and Sidney Russell Mason. The ceremony took place in the Congregational Church there and was followed by a breakfast and reception at the beautiful country home of the bride's parents near by.

Miss Whitin was one of the most interesting and popular of the debutantes in Boston two Winters ago, and has a host of friends here, especially in the younger set. She is a cousin of Miss Hildagarde Lasell, who came out last Winter, and also of Miss Marion Lasell, who is to be among this Winter's debutantes.

The Alexander S. Porters have opened their town house on Brimmer street, having just come up from their Summer home at Campobello. Miss Elizabeth Porter is in Philadelphia, where she has gone to participate in the woman's national golf championship which opened Monday at the Marion Cricket Club.

Other of our golf girls now in Philadelphia are Miss Mary B. Adams, who holds the Eastern title in the women's golf association; Miss Harriet S. and Miss Margaret Curtis, former national champions, and Miss Louisa Wells.

* * *

Mrs. Elliot Russell and Miss Catherine E. Russell of Marlboro street have just arrived in Del Monte, Cal., where they will spend several weeks.

* * *

Professor Alexander Agassiz of Cambridge returned from Newport to his home here yesterday to be present at the inauguration of President A. Lawrence Lowell at Harvard to-day.

* * *

Miss Margaret Huntington, daughter of the late Dr. William R. Huntington, rector of Grace Church in New York, has been visiting in Brookline since the death of her father last July. Miss Huntington has been the guest of her sister, who lives in Chestnut Hill, but returns to New York to-day, where she will occupy the rectory adjoining the church for the present. Miss Huntington had been studying art in Paris when she was called to this country by the last illness of Dr. Huntington.

Miss Gladys Ingalls entertained a company of young people at Hot Springs yesterday, among them being Miss Katherine Fay of this city.

Congratulations are still received by Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Weld on the arrival of a little daughter at their home. Mrs. Weld was Miss Silvia Parsons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Barclay Parsons of this city, and her marriage to Mr. Weld took place at Trinity Church in New York last November. The Perfume of the Lady in Black

By GASTON LEROUX

(Copyright, 1909, by Brentano's)

"And still there is one thing that I don't understand!" I exclaimed. "The death of Pere Bernier. Who killed Bernier?"

"It was the cane!" said Rouletabille, gloomily. "It was that damned cane!"

"I thought that it was 'the oldest dagger known to humanity.'"

"It was both of them; the cane and the flint. But it was the cane which decided his death; the stone was only his executioner."

I stared at Rouletabille, asking myself whether, this time, I had not come to the end of his intelligence.

"You never understood, Sainclair—among other things—why upon the morrow of the day on which I had come to comprehend everything, I had let fall Arthur Rance's ivory-headed cane in front of M. and Mme. Darzac. It was because I hoped that M. Darzac would pick it up. You remember, Sainclair, the ivory-headed cane which Larsan used to carry and the gestures he was in the habit of making with it while we were at the Glandier? He had a fashion of holding his cane which was all his own. I wanted to see whether Darzac would hold an ivory-headed cane as Larsan had used to do. And this fixed idea pursued me until the morrow, even after my visit to the insane asylum. Even after I had seen and felt the true Darzac, I longed to see the imposter make the gestures of Larsan. Ah, to see him suddenly brandish his cane like a bandit—forget the disguise of his figure for one single moment! throw back his falsely stooped shoulders. 'Knock it, please! Knock at the shield of the Mortolas with heavy blows of the cane, dear, dear M. Darzac!' And he knocked it—and I saw his form—erect—undisguised! Another man saw it and he is dead! It was poor Bernier, who was so horrified at the sight that he stumbled and fell so unfortunately on the 'oldest dagger' that the wound killed him. He is dead because he picked up the flint which, doubtless, had fallen out of Old Bob's overcoat and which Bernier had intended to take to the workshop of the Professor in the Round Tower! He is dead, because at the same moment that he picked up the flint he saw Larsan brandishing his cane—saw the scoundrel's figure and his gestures! All battles, Sainclair, have their innocent victims!"

We were both silent for a moment. And I could not keep myself from mentioning the bitterness which I felt at the knowledge that he had had so little confidence in me. I could not pardon him for having deceived me, as he had done everyone else in regard to Old Bob.

He smiled.

"That was something that didn't bother me at all. I was certain enough that he was not in the sack! However, on the night before he was fished out of the grotto after I had hidden the true Darzac, under the guidance of Bernier, in the New Chateau, and had left the gallery of the underground passage after having left there my boat in readiness for my projects of the morrow—my boat which had belonged to Paolo, a fisherman, and a friend of 'the Hangman of the Sea,' I regained the bank by my oars. I was undressed and carried my clothing in a package on my head. As I went on, I met Paolo, who was amazed to see me taking a bath at such an hour and invited me to go fishing with him. I accepted. And then I learned that the bark which I had used belonged to Tullio. The 'Hangman of the Sea' had suddenly become rich and had announced to everyone that he was about to return to his native country. He said that he had sold some precious shells to the old professor for a very great deal of money and, in fact, for many days past, he had been seen a great deal in 'the old professor's' company. Paolo knew that before going to Venice, Tullio intended to stop at San Remo.

When I heard all this, I had a clear insight into Old Bob's behavior and disappearance. He had needed a boat in quitting the chateau and this boat was that of the 'Hangman of the Sea.' I asked him for the address of Tullio in San Remo and sent it to Arthur Rance in an anonymous letter. Rance started for San Remo, believing that Tullio could inform him as to the fate of Old Bob. And, in fact, Old Bob had paid Tullio to take him to the grotto and then to disappear. It was out of pity for the old savant that I had decided to warn Arthur Rance; for I feared that some accident might have befallen his relative. As for myself, all that I could ask was that the old dandy would not put in an appearance before I had finished with Larsan, for I wanted the false Darzac to believe that Old Bob was occupying my mind to the exclusion of everything else. And when I learned that he really had returned, I was, at first, only half pleased, but I confess that the news of the wound in his breast (because of the wound in the breast of the man in the sack) did not cause me any pain at all. Thanks to that injury, I might hope to continue my game a few hours longer."

"And why should you not have abandoned it immediately?"

"Don't you understand that it would have been impossible for me to have gotten rid of the body of Larsan in the daylight? A whole day was necessary to prepare for the disappearance by night. But what a day we had with the death of Bernier! The arrival of the gendarmes only served to simplify the affair. I waited until I knew that they had gone. The first rifle shot that you heard when we were in the Square Tower was to inform me that the last gendarme had quitted the tavern at Albo, at the Point of Garibaldi; the second told me that the customs officers had gone into their cabins and were at supper and that the sea was free!"

"Tell me, Rouletabille," I said, looking into his clear eyes. "When you left Tullio's boat at the end of the gallery of the passageway, for the carrying out of your plans, did you know already what that boat would carry away on the morrow?"

Rouletabille bowed his head.

"No," he answered, sadly and slowly. "No—do not think that, Sainclair! I did not expect that it would carry away a corpse. After all—he was my father! I believed that the boat would carry the 'body too many' to the madhouse! You understand, Sainclair? I would only have condemned him to prison—forever. But he killed himself. It is God who did it. May God forgive him!"

(THE END.)

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

A young man of very limited means, after the marriage ceremony, presented to the minister twenty-seven large copper cents, all spread out on the palm of his right hand.

"This is all I've got, parson," he said. Seeing a disappointed look in the minister's face, he added, "If we have any children, we will send them to your Sunday school."

The magistrate was incredulous. "You mean to say that this physical wreck (indicating the prisoner) gave you a black eye?"

"Yes," retorted the prosecutor, "but he wasn't a physical wreck until he gave me the black eye."

Milk from High-Bred Holsteins
Six Cents Per Quart

That is what Van Camp's Milk actually means. A rich, sterile milk—the best milk and cream for every purpose—always on hand when wanted.

The first can you get of Van Camp's milk will open a new era in your household economy.

No more buying from hand to mouth, no more shortage, no more waste.

No more germ-laden milk for your table. No more half-milk—skimmed or settled—to be used in cooking.

No more milk from mongrel cows—nothing but genuine Holstein.

That is why you won't go back to the milkman when we once win you away.

No Tubercular Cows

The chief danger in raw milk lies in tubercular germs. Millions of infected cows, milked every day, are spreading consumption at a terrible rate.

That is why every authority advises sterilized milk.

Van Camp's milk is sterilized, but that isn't all. Our cows are inspected, so we know none is infected.

Our dairies are sanitary in the extreme. Our evaporating plants are built without wood. We employ every modern precaution.

The result is a milk which is utterly sterile. A milk that is safe, without a germ of any kind in it.

Rich Holstein Milk

We buy none but Holstein cows—the world's finest breed, famed for their splendid vitality.

The milk from such cows is immeasurably better for children than the milk of mongrel cows.

This milk, fresh from the cows, is placed in a vacuum. And a moderate heat, because of the vacuum, throws off the water in steam.

Thus we take out two-thirds of the water, and the milk that results is as thick as thick cream. It contains 28 per cent total solids, and 8 per cent butter fat.

We use no sugar, no starch, no preservative. Van Camp's is simply rich Holstein milk, reduced for convenience in shipping.

Six Cents Per Quart

The cost of Van Camp's, when you replace the water which we evaporate, is about six cents per quart.

The 10-cent can contains a full pint of milk reduced to the minimum. And grocers give discounts on cases.

So Van Camp's is cheaper than raw milk, because your milkman's daily delivery costs more than the milk itself.

And you have no waste when you use Van Camp's. You never have milk left over. You open a can when you want it, and it keeps till you use it up.

A Cow in the Kitchen

Van Camp's means a cow in the kitchen. Rich milk or cream for every purpose—all you want and all the time.

Add one part water for coffee or cereals. It is then like the richest cream. For cooking or drinking, reduce as you like.

Van Camp's gives to milk dishes twice the richness and flavor that you get from raw milk. For this is whole milk, with all the butter fat, all the solids in it.

In milkman's milk, the butter fat rises and the solids fall. You don't get the whole milk from any part of the can. Then you let it stand and it separates more. So the milk used for cooking is rarely more than a half-milk.

You'll be amazed at the flavor which Van Camp's gives to milk dishes. Not the slight almond flavor, due to sterilization, apparent when Van Camp's is drunk cold. You get that same flavor from milkman's milk when you heat it. The delicious flavor that Van Camp's gives to milk dishes is due to the richness, the wholeness of the milk.

Don't be Misled

If you want Holstein milk, reduced to the minimum, you will always insist on Van Camp's.

Others may claim that common milk, only partly reduced, is just as good as Van Camp's. But it isn't.

And don't think that condensed milk, which is nearly half sugar, is anything like Van Camp's. Van Camp's contains no sugar—no addition whatever.

Sugar was used to preserve milk before the days of sterilization. It is entirely unnecessary now. If you want sugar, you can buy it for half what it costs in a can of milk.

And condensed milk, because of the sugar, is unfit for cooking. You can't use it as you can Van Camp's. So, please let no one mislead you.

The 16-oz. can of Van Camp's sells for 10 cents; the 6-oz. can for 5 cents. So you get one-third more for your money in buying the larger cans. Grocers give discounts on cases. The milk is produced at our dairies, located in six states.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

COPPER STOCK PRICES FIRM

STATE STREET, Oct. 6.—Stocks recovered from yesterday's severe shaking up, and although there was a light business in copper shares prices held firm this afternoon. There was no pressure to sell even though speculative copper warrants were weak in London. There is no change to note in the domestic situation, which means that sales are light and the price heavy. Toward the noon hour prices weakened somewhat and the market became groggy.

Steel common was again the active feature and wire houses were sellers this forenoon. From an opening at 89⅝ here it rose to 90¼, reacting to below the opening price again. Mr. Lawson's broadside has been postponed, if not entirely sidetracked. At least, this is the version that State Street takes of the affair.

Lake Copper maintained a firm tone and stiffened to 37⅝ on light transactions, and North Butte continues suspiciously strong. The latter moved up from 60¼ to 60⅞. Amalgamated was quiet around 82.

The increase in the Atchison common dividend from a 5 to a 6 per cent. basis, announced this forenoon, had been generally expected.

Curb business was light, with some activity in specialties. Prices were generally steady. Bay State Gas settled to 50 cents and Willet varied from 30 to 34 cents.

STOCK MARKET IS IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Stocks continued irregular in Wall Street to-day in anticipation of action on the Atchison dividend. The directors declared a semi-annual dividend of three per cent. This is an advance of one per cent. from the previous five per cent. annual rate, and restores the six per cent. basis which was initiated in June, 1907, but discontinued with the outbreak of the panic. At the opening today the leading shares were weak, with Steel common showing a loss of 1⅛ points.

Declines of about one point were recorded throughout the list. Several minutes after the beginning of trading a better tone developed and the list moved upward under leadership of steel common and New York Central. Before the end of the first half-hour nearly all the losses had been wiped out and replaced by fractional gains.

The Bank of England is expected to increase its discount rate to-morrow in order to offset probable exports of gold to America as a result of the large supply of cotton bills drawn against the English financial centre. The volume of these bills is about 50 per cent. greater than at this time last year, and they are worth many millions more because of the high price of cotton. American shares were fractionally lower in London.

On the Curb market Chicago subway was heavy and sold at the new low record of 6¾. Trading in mining shares was quiet with no material change in prices.

What Should Be a Man's Object in Life?

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

Sermons in stones are familiar, but few take the trouble to dig them out. Certainly none looks for sermons in a one-cent evening newspaper.

At the same time, will you kindly think over and answer the question that heads this column?

Here we are, marooned for a few days on a flying ball of earth. We don't know how we got here. We don't know where we are going. We are full of beautiful and satisfying FAITH. But we don't KNOW.

Into this Universe, and WHY not knowing,
Nor WHENCE, like Water, willy-nilly flowing;
And out of it as Wind along the Waste,
I know not WHITHER, willy-nilly blowing.

That's the way Omar, the old tent-maker, puts it.

We drift from dinner to the theatre; thence to bed; thence to breakfast; thence to work, and so on. Or, if in hard luck, we struggle and wail, "cursing our day," or more frequently cursing society.

We rarely stop to think what it is all about, or what we are here for.

We know the pig's object in life. It has been beautifully and permanently outlined in Carlyle's "pig catechism." The pig's life object is to get fat and keep fat—to get his full share of swill and as much more as he can manage to secure. And his life object is worthy. By sticking at it he develops fat hams inside his bristles, and WE know, though he does not, that the production of fat hams is his destiny.

But our human destiny is NOT to produce fat hams. Why do so many of us live earnestly on the pig basis? Why do we struggle savagely for money to buy our kind of swill—luxury, food, etc.—and cease all struggling when that money is obtained?

Is fear of poverty and dependence the only emotion that should move us?

Are we here merely to STAY here and EAT here?

A great German scientist, very learned and about as imaginative as a wart hog, declares that the human face is merely an extension and elaboration of the alimentary canal—that the beauty of expression, the marvellous qualities of a noble human face, are merely indirect results of the alimentary canal's strivings to satisfy its wants.

That is a hideous conception, is it not? But it is no more unworthy than the average human life, and the average existence has much to justify the German's speculations.

What SHALL we strive for? MONEY?

Get a thousand millions. Your day will come; and in due course the graveyard rat will gnaw as calmly at your bump of acquisitiveness as at the mean coat of the pauper.

Then, shall we strive for POWER?

The names of the first great kings of the world are forgotten, and the names of all those whose power we envy will drift to forgetfulness soon. What does the most powerful man in the world amount to standing at the brink of Niagara, with his solar plexus trembling? What is his power compared with the force of the wind or the energy of one small wave sweeping along the shore?

The power which man can build up within himself, for himself, is nothing. Only the dull reasoning of gratified egotism can make it seem worth while.

Then what IS worth while? Let us look at some of the men who have come and gone, and whose lives inspire us. Take a few at random:

Columbus, Michael Angelo, Wilberforce, Shakespeare, Galileo, Fulton, Watt, Hargreaves—these will do.

Let us ask ourselves this question: "Was there any ONE THING that distinguished ALL their lives, that united all these men, active in fields so different?"

Yes. Every man among them, and every man whose life history is worth the telling, did something for THE GOOD OF OTHER MEN.

Hargreaves, the weaver, invented the spinning-jenny, and his invention clothes and employs hundreds of millions.

Galileo perfected the telescope, spread out before man's intellect the grandeur of the universe. Wilberforce helped to awaken man's conscience. He freed millions of slaves. Columbus gave a home to great nations. We thrive to-day beause of his noble courage. Michael Angelo and Shakespeare stirred human genius to new efforts, and fed the human mind—a task more worthy than the feeding of the human stomach. We ride in Fulton's steamboats and Watt's engine pulls us along.

Men who are truly great have DONE GOOD to their fellow-man. And the greatest Soul ever born on earth came to urge but one thing upon humanity, "LOVE ONE ANOTHER."

Get money if you can. Get power if you can. Then, if you want to be more than the ten thousand million unknown mingled in the dust beneath you, see what good you can do with your money and your power.

If you are one of the many millions who have not and can't get money or power, see what good you can do without either.

You can help carry a load for an old man. You can encourage and help a poor devil trying to reform. You can set a good example to children. You can stick to the men with whom you work, fighting honestly for their welfare.

Time was when the ablest man would rather kill ten men than feed a thousand children. That time has gone. We do not care much about feeding the children, but we care less about killing the men. To that extent we have improved already.

The day will come when we shall prefer helping our neighbor to robbing him—legally—of a million dollars.

Do what good you can NOW, while it is unusual, and have the satisfaction of being a pioneer and an eccentric.

Now, when is Wright going to fly over Boston Common? We're not sceptical, but we'd like to be shown.

These college hazings around Boston are getting very commonplace. When it comes to making a "freshie" roll a peanut up hill and sit under a table and grow, the "good old days" we hear so much about seem to be over.

* * *

No, little Bobby, the word "polemics" was not invented by Mr. Peary.

"Hell will be a bore," says a Chicago clergyman. It probably will—after Chicago.

On Saturday the BOSTON AMERICAN printed on this page an article concerning the various characters which appear regularly in the series of comic pictures printed in this paper.

The object was to learn from the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN which ones were the most popular. Nearly 400 readers of the AMERICAN have sent in replies announcing which they find the most enjoyable.

All the old standbys—Mutt, Little Jeff, Mr. Jack, the Monks, the Hall-Room boys, Father John Wiggins, Bunk, Diogenes, Mr. Dubb and Mr. Dough—appear to have numerous firm friends.

Here are some of the letters received:

WHAT DOES HE MEAN?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Answering your question regarding your cartoons, I think Mr. A. Mutt is the limit.

FORREST O. BICKFORD.

Dorchester Centre.

HALL-ROOMS ALL AROUND

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I like the Hall-Room boys best, for we see such people every day. I have taken your paper ever since its first issue.

Box 546, Lowell. H. H. MORE.

HURRAY FOR MUTT

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I have been in Boston for four years, and I have bought the AMERICAN every evening and Sunday since I came here. I think Mutt the best character in your comic pictures.

A. M. J.

Roxbury.

MR. JACK GETS A PIPPIN

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Nothing can beat your Mr. Swinnerton's comic pictures. That Mr. Jack which you print in the daily paper and his comic pictures in the SUNDAY AMERICAN beat the world.

MRS. FRANK BARSTOW,

Weymouth.

A TIP FOR F. OPPER

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Give us some more of Mr. Dubb and Mr. Dough shipwrecked on the island. That series is a bird. Let 'em come often.

Quincy. C. H. HARLOW.

OH MUTT! HERE'S A NEW ONE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

You ask who is the most popular of the "bunch" that you run in your paper. Well, Mutt sure is my choice. Of all the sensible fools that I ever met, he is the candy kid, and any time that he gets short I will back him to the last Lincoln gum coaxer. Of course, Jeff goes with him, and then Father is a close second.

With regards to all the crowd.

F. W. BRAYNARD.

Box 65, Providence, R. I.

INGROWING LAUGHTER

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

T. E. Powers is my favorite cartoonist. He can deliver the punch every time, and the longer you look at his pictures the longer you laugh. EDWARD CURLEY.

Warren street, Roxbury.

A WHOLE ROW OF THEM

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Which cartoon do I like best?

First Mutt, second Powers, third Gus Mager's monks. H. ROSENBLUM.

Salem street.

SEEMS TO BE IN DOUBT

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

It is pretty hard to say which of your funny characters are the best; they are all good, but my preference would be:

1.—The Hall-Room Boys.
2. Father's Troubles.
3.—Mutt. (Really should be first.)

Colonial Building. J. E. S.

HITS THE WHOLE FAMILY.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I have read all of the comic pictures in the BOSTON AMERICAN, and I think I like Mutt the best of all.

I am of a large family and we all try to get the paper first to read about Mutt.

CONSTANT READER OF MUTT

Haverhill.

SPEAK UP, "BUD"

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Regarding your article in the BOSTON AMERICAN concerning the comic pictures, I think that Mutt and Jeff are the best.

I get the AMERICAN every evening for the purpose of seeing those two characters. Would like to know more about them and of the artist, Bud Fisher.

A NEW BEDFORD READER

A young Baltimore man, who is quick to see a point and somewhat of a wit himself, walked into a shop the other day and asked for a comb.

"Do you want a narrow man's comb?" asked the attendant, all unconscious of his terms.

"No," said the customer, gravely; "I want a comb for a stout man with rubber teeth."
